SISTERS OF CHARITY SCIENCE

Use Pe-ru-na for Coughs, Colds, Grip and Catarrh--A Congressman's Letter.

In every country of the civilized world Sisters of Charity are known. Not only do they minister to the spiritual and intellectual needs of the charges committed to their care, but they also minister to their bodily needs.

With so many children to take care of and to protect from climate and disease, these wise and prudent Sisters have found Peruna a never failing safeguard.

Dr. Hartman receives many letters from Catholic Sisters from all over the United States. A recommend recently received from a Catholic institution in Detroit, Mich., reads as follows:

Dr. S. B. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio:

Dear Sir:—"The young girl who used the Peruna was suffering from laryngitis, and loss of voice. The result of the treatment was most saits/actory. She found great relief, and after further use of the medicine we hope to be able to say she is entirely cured."—Sisters of Charity

The young girl was under the care of the Sisters of Charity, and used Peruna for eatarth of the throat with good results, as the above letter testifies.

The usual problems confronted the American engineers who constructed the power-transmission line from the Cauvery Falls to the Kolar gold mines, in India. The wires were carried on poles through the jungle, the distance of the line being ninety miles. To prevent the depredations of white ants, the poles are set in seven-foot iron sockets; otherwise the pests would soon destroy them. And to make the wires safe from the inquisitive trunks of wild elephants they were strung at an elevation beyond their reach. Careful measurement was made to this Cerman woodworkers and builders any that wood that comes to the sawmill or the workship by floating is much better for their purposes than tian which is brought in dry. The reason is that, while the wood is lying in the water, its sap and albuminous and salty materials are dissolved out. If these substances remain in the wood they readily absorb moisture from the atmosphere after coming out of the drying rooms, and the wood Artificial means of washing out the substances are used in Germany with wood that has not been floated.

Interviewing as Literature. As a matter of fact, all estimable literature is but a form of elaboration of our American interview. Adam's report is an example, but not a particularly felicitous paragraph of holy writ. If Homer tells the truth he is a star reporter. We account Plato a greater man than Socrates, whose extraordinary loquacity he embalmed. It is open to doubt whether the frame of Dr. Samuel Johnson could have been nated save through the interviews which Boswell set down, seeing toat his dictionary is now nothing but literary dust. It is unquestionable that unless his several valets and marshals had recorded their luminous interviews and impressions we should never fully have known how exceedingly great was Napoleon Bonaparte.

And in our own time we have seen how the American newspaper man has developed the value of the personal note and interest in the interview; how Horace Greeley, from having written so much about other celebrties came to have so much written about himself; how George Alfred Townsend illuminated the characters of his political contemporaries; how John Russell Young did the same and gave us our most intimate glimpse of Grant.

A hundred able interviewers have performed biographical services of greater or less value. Thousands of them, in all civilized lands, are carrying on the good work to-day.-Mail and Express.

When Linen is Translucent. The whiteness and opacity of dry linen, as of writing paper, are due mainly to the fact of repeated reflexions at the surface, so that the light is wasted in these reverberations before it can reach to any depth.

The body of linen is a network of transparent fibres not in optical contact, which intercept the light by repeatedly reflexing it. Now, if the intertices of these fibers are filled by a body of the same refractive index as the fibres themselves the reflexion of the surface is destroyed and the linen is rendered more transparent. Water does this; hence linen when wet is darker, but more translucent, just as is the oiled paper used for tracings by architects and engineers.

The same holds good with ordinary glass and ground glass, the repeated inflexions of the latter making it far less transporent. To a similar cause are due the whiteness and opacity of snow, of sait and of pulverized glass.

A RUSSIAN EXECUTION.

kable Sang Fruid of a Despera

Some time ago a Russian criminal was executed in St. Petersburg, says the Washington Post. He had during the last two years murdered twelve persons, the last one being a priest. The law did not show the monster any mercy, but speedly condemned him to death.

Stebljanski was the name of this wholesale murderer, and he hoped to the last for elemency. When the death warrant was read and the keeper informed him that he had but six hours to live he raged and swore to revenge himself in the most terrible manner. After being left alone in the cell the first thing he did was to break his lamp, and, procuring some matches, he set fire to the oil. In a moment the flames broke through the window and the entire building was for a time threatened with destruction. Fortunately, the fire was discovered in time and got under control before much damage had been done, but in the meantime a terrible struggle ensued between the keepers and the criminal, who had fortified himself with an iron bar taken from his bedstead. The first man to enter the cell was knocked senseless, and it was only after being nimost suffocated with smoke that the prisoner was finally overpowered. Next morning the execution took place. The condemned man ascended the scaffold with much bravado, made a thorough examination of the same and finally declared that the rope was too

"I cannot get my head in the loop," he said, "and though it will cause me some inconvenience to wait I will smoke a cigarette while you are hav-ing it attended to."

He lighted a eigarette, and, turning to the executioner, made a speech, pointing out the detestable in his profession, and as a condemned criminal in Russia has certain rights no one dared to interrupt him.

The executioner, who really was a tender-hearted man, became visibly affected by the moralizing words of the murderer, and, turning to the crowd assembled before the scaffold, declared that his conscience did not allow him to proceed to take a fellow-being's life, and he then and there resigned his position and departed midst the shouts of the assemblage.

This eaused great confusion amous the representatives of the law, for where could they in a burry get an other executioner? The question was however, solved by the condemned man, who declared that he would exc cute himself as soon as he got through smoking. He started an interesting conversation with the priest during the five minutes or so which he had left, and recommended that he read I'd just as lief promise to obey a Count Tolstol's latest book, which contains striking remarks about the relation of capital punishment to the teachings of Christianity. He then threw a kiss to a pretty girl among the spectators, stuck his head in the loop, and kicked away the trap beneath his

Intelligent Use of the Shears. The editor who uses the shears intelligently, says the Burlington Hawkeye, cannot be classed as a lazy editor. Be it understood that to read and understand and appreciate the writings of others and to be able to cull from the thoughts of a fellow editor the gist of his argument so as to give the readers the benefit is a task in comparison with which the writing of a long and ponderous "leading" editorial is child's play.

To have the mind capable of recognizing and culling the gems of thought from exchanges is not laziness. To read with care the numerous editorial pages that come to an exchange table so as to be thoroughly in touch with the thought of the day and to select with intelligence the best of this editorial thought is not laziness. It is the hardest part of a conscientious newspaper editor's work.

The brightest editorial pages in the State or nation are those which contain, in addition to the thoughts of the editor, a well selected symposium of extracts from other newspapers. It is this sort of editorial page which is of the most value to a discriminating reader, and it conveys more genuine thought and imparts more pleasure to the student of the world's affairs.

A Plague of Elephants. Concerning the large increase in the number of man eating tigers in India. which is said to be due to the wholesale slaughter of deer and the conse quent difficulty on the part of "Stripes" in finding his usual food, it may b pointed out that there is a plague o elephants in Madras, owing to over production. The damage done to crops and to young forests is becoming quite serious, and it is even hinted that many human lives are sacrificed in the endeavor to combat the nuisance. It is estimated that in the last twenty to twenty-five years the number of wild elephants in Madras has, owing to protective legislation, been quadru-pled, and some drastic measures seem to have now become absolutely necessary.-King.

In a paper which he read before the British Association, Sir Robert Gif-fen put the annual income of the 300,-000,000 people inhabiting British India and the feudatory States at $2,340,000,-000, or $78 per cipita. Writing to the London Times, William Digby, the Indian authority, asserts that this is an overestimate. He shys there is not so great an income, actually, for the 300,000,000 of to-day as there was for 250,000,000 twenty years ago. He says that the total visible income of India in 1900 was $1,449,799,595, which gives each individual less than $50 a year to live on. In the Presidency of Madras be estimated that the income of the 34,000,000 inhabitants is five-eighths of a penny per head per day.
