

INTEREST TO WOMEN

WOMAN DOG FANCIERS.
Society women who until recently did not take an active interest in the showing of dogs in the ring have now fairly caught the craze. The two most important factors in creating this feminine interest have been the Ladies' Kennel Association of America and the Ladies' Kennel Association of Massachusetts. The former holds a yearly spring show at Hempstead, L. I., and last autumn it had the courage to hold an indoor show at Madison Square Garden. The Ladies' Kennel Association of Massachusetts, although longer in existence than its sister club in New York, has never held a show of its own, but it will inaugurate a distinctive woman's show, to be managed entirely by members, next June at the Brookdale Farm, Braintree, Mass., the home of the New England Kennel Club.—Illustrated Sporting News.

QUAINT LITTLE MANTLES.
A quaint fashion which is being attempted is that of little mantles of the gown material to wear with street and carriage dresses. One sees a few at every opening. Many taffeta gowns are made with mantles, this material seeming to be especially appropriate for them. They are trimmed with ruffings and pleated frills, and some, in velveteen or similar materials, are quite elaborately decorated with lace and embroidery. Scarfs of one kind or another are in the greatest favor. Stoles of chiffon, made in elaborate shirtings and quiltings, and trimmed with chiffon shower bouquets—these does not seem to be any better way to describe them—are seen everywhere. In all the Paris fashion plates the models are wearing lace and chiffon scarfs with evening and house gowns, while mantles and scarfs accompany most of the street gowns. All this goes with the long shoulders and full skirts of the 0's. No one would be surprised if she saw a man.

MAKE HOME ATTRACTIVE.
Why do boys and girls go away from home for their amusement? The truth is, if a boy or girl goes away from home six or seven nights in a week somebody is to blame. Some place is more attractive than home. If the children enjoy home they will wish to stay there. Perhaps father wants to read the paper and won't endure the games and laughter. It is the power of more consequence than his children's safety? Then let him not complain if he finds his sons in work-houses. Are mother's nerves so unstrung by household cares that a sudden bump "sets her on edge"? Can she not teach herself endurance? Then she must not mourn if she drives her daughters to the streets. It is only in the evening that the family circle can be complete and when every one is at home, home should be an immense playground. No father can hold his son's regard unless to share in his sports. No mother can be her daughter's confidant unless she listens eagerly to the tales of mischief and romance. It is such an easy thing to lose the confidence of the growing child; there are so many curious ears among the friends and playmates longing to listen.

A COUNTESS' ROMANCE.
London Truth tells how the Countess of Walderssee first met her first husband, Prince Frederick of Schleswig-Holstein-Augustenburg and so forth. In 1864, at one of those amusing dances of the Empress Eugenie. The Empress got them up to be able to invite Secessionist beauties, who at them would be in no danger of running against Northerners. She and the Sidells, Masons, and McGruders found a society god-mother in a New Orleans lady of considerable standing at Court, the Marquise de Chasseloup-Laubat, whose husband held the Marine Portfolio. Prince Frederick, who had come to Paris to explain to the Emperor the Schleswig-Holstein tangle, received an invitation to one of the dances, and felt so dazzled at the show of youth, beauty, innocence, and free yet maidenly manners that he forgot all about his mission. He at first fell in love with all the Southern belles, but as France is not Turkey, he had to make a choice, and he chose Miss Esther Lee, as it seemed to him, the flower of the bevy, proposed to her, and had the happiness after some delay to be accepted. She had attained the "sensible" age of twenty-seven. Prince Frederick laid his case of a love-stricken elderly Prince before the Emperor Franz Joseph, and stated that his Imperial Majesty would greatly facilitate his suit if he promised to confer with Miss Lee. In the event of her accepting him, the title of Princess of Noer, Noer being a village in Schleswig. Francis Joseph sympathized with Frederick, as he has since done with diverse members of his own family under like circumstances. The courtship began in the early spring of 1864, and the wedding took place in Paris on November 3 of the same year. Prince Frederick died at Baireuth in 1893, and the widow, still beautiful and interesting, married Count Walderssee at Leutenbach, in Wurtemberg, on April 14, 1874.

Boydell's CHAT:

The toys used by Queen Victoria when a child are on exhibition at the World's Fair at St. Louis. Any one can add strength and weight to his body by rubbing well with olive oil after a warm bath. Oil baths are particularly beneficial to delicate children. At a recent fashionable wedding in London the hats of the bridesmaids were trimmed with natural flowers, and it is predicted that the style will be popular next summer. In Dutch Guiana the women carry upon their persons all their family savings in the shape of heavy bracelets, anklets, necklaces and even crowns of gold and silver. The Japanese woman does not blacken her teeth under any mistaken idea that it makes her attractive. She does it to make herself unattractive. Her husband is supposed to know her value. Recently an old woman at Clinchy, France, was told that she had won $20,000 in a Spanish lottery. Later she found that she had been hoaxed, and the shock of the disappointment killed her instantly. The oldest love-letter in the world is in the British Museum. It is a proposal of marriage for the hand of an Egyptian princess and it was made 3500 years ago. It is in the form of an inscribed brick. A piece of hard the size of an egg reamed with sugar and divided into three parts and taken at intervals of twenty minutes will relieve any attack of cramps that has not progressed to the fatal point. The headdress and coral jewelry of a Dutch woman are usually heirlooms and vary greatly, according to the riches of the family. The gold fastening of the coral necklace also may be anything from a very small plain clasp to one the size of a brooch covered with expensive filigree work, and when it is large enough to satisfy the pride of the owner it is always worn in front. One or all of these pieces of jewelry form a part of every girl's dot, while the remainder of it among the farming people of the north consists of cows and sheep. It is most amusing to hear it said of a young woman who is about to marry: "She has an excellent dot; fifty cows and sheep, a good headband and ornaments and such beautiful coral necklace and earrings."

BETTY THINGS TO WEAR

New York City.—Waists of lace over chiffon or mousseline are eminently fashionable and are charmingly becoming and attractive as well. This one frogs and olives, and the cleverly gored skirt shows the necessary fullness about the feet. Here we see the one-color costume, the entire arrangement being carried out in a soft tan shade. Colors may come, by the way, and colors may go, but tan is one of the lasting favorites. The blouse worn with this suit is of creamy batiste, inset with lace. Lace in the same shade serves as an effective applique along the edge of the modish tan sunshade. Most richly does the natural shade of the modish straw hat blend in with the tone of the cloth. It is trimmed with velvet ribbon (emerald, brown, black, cream or red are equally good) and the rosette at the left back is particularly good. And one word before we leave this subject. The short coat walking suit is much more becoming to most of us than the short skirt with a long coat.

Deep Cream Boas.
In the short ostrich boas to be seen this year a pretty one is a deep cream. Deep cream or pale tan is seen in many ways this year, in embroidery in white or entire garments made of it, and the cream ostrich boa matches costumes better than the plain white as well as being prettier and more becoming.
Shirt Waist.
Shirt waists long ago came to be numbered among the must-haves. Whatever else the wardrobe may lack they are certain to be found. This season they are, if possible, more tempting than ever before and are shown in most alluring variety. The model shown is new and smart and is suited alike to washable and to silk and wool waistings, but is the case of the orig-

The waist is made with fronts and back that are fitted by means of shoulder and under arm seams and over which the yoke is applied, the extensions over the shoulder giving the long and drooping line that is so greatly in vogue. The tucks at the back are arranged to give the becoming tapering lines to the figure, while those of the front and sleeves extend for a part of their length only and provide fullness below. The cuffs make a novel feature and are shaped to match the yoke.
