LOW-RATE TOUR TO DENVER.

Via Pennsylvania Railroad, Account International Convention, Epworth League.

On account of the Epworth League International Convention, to be held in Denver, Col., July 5 to 9, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company has arranged a tour to Denver under its Personally-conducted System. A special train of high-grade Pullman equipment will leave New York, Philadelphia, Harrisburg, Altoona, and Pittsburg on Monday, July 3, arriving Denver at 12:30 noon on Wednesday, July 5. Tickets covering round-trip transportation, Pullman accommodations (one berth) going, and all meals in dining car when traveling on special train, will be sold at the following very low rates: New York, $63.50; Philadelphia, $61.75; Baltimore, $60.00; Washington, $60.00; Harrisburg, $59.75; Williamsport, $59.75; Altoona, $58.75; and at proportionate rates from other stations.

These tickets will be good for passage to either Denver, Colorado Springs, or Pueblo, and will be good for return passage on regular trains to leave either of the above-mentioned points not later than July 14. Deposit of tickets with Joint Agent at either Denver, Colorado Springs, or Pueblo not later than July 14 and payment of fee of fifty cents secures an extension of return limit to leave either of the above points not later than August 8.

These liberal return limits will enable tourists to take advantage of the many delightful side trips to resorts in the Colorado Mountains, the Yellowstone Park, the Grand Canyon of Arizona, and the Lewis and Clark Exposition at Portland, for which special reduced-rate tickets will be on sale at Denver, Colorado Springs, and Pueblo.

For further information concerning specific rates, stop-over privileges, and returning routes consult ticket agents. A descriptive itinerary will be mailed upon application to Geo. W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia, Pa.

New wash goods ready for your inspection at Millions.

BEGGARS' OUTFITTER.

Creates Aliments to Order and Manufactures Cripples.

In a small but neat and comfortable red brick house at Hackney lives an elderly, careworn man who is known to his neighbors by the mysterious title of "the beggars' tailor." The "beggars' outfitter" would be a more appropriate sobriquet, for the elderly man's trade has nothing to do with the making of clothes. He equips and fits out professional mendicants for the practice of their trade.

"A mendicant who has not mastered the tricks of the trade," began the beggars' tailor, "has no more chance of making money than has a pugilist who has not learned to box. He must get an outfit. For a woman a small child is the most essential detail. But six beggar women out of eight have no children of their own of the right age. I supply them.

"But that's only a small part of my business. I'll guarantee to make the healthiest looking man in England resemble an anaemic cripple in ten minutes. Only a man who can work that transformation has a right to call himself a beggars' tailor.

"The public likes horrors. Do you see those?" The beggars' tailor took from his breast pocket a large pill box and removed the lid. Inside were about a score of wafers of different sizes, shiny with some adhesive on one side, and red, protuberant and nasty looking on the other.

"Those," he continued, "are beggars' sores. It doesn't sound nice, but you don't want niceness in this business. My clients purchase them from me, stick them in the exact spot on their necks or faces and find them a good investment. When the wafer is stuck on, the skin around it must be carefully treated with red and white coloring matter.

"Sturdy beggars up from the country always pose on the verge of starvation. If it weren't for me their fat faces would be thin. But, as every stage dresser knows, a few artificial lines and a judicious use of shadows will make a face like Falstaff's emaciated and lean. Beggars seldom wash, and that's lucky for themselves. Otherwise they'd be put to fresh expense every day.

"Are there other tricks of the trade? I should think so. If you ever see a one legged beggar wearing a long coat, ten to one he's a 'crook.' With a little practice a sound limbed man can bend up his leg till it's almost parallel with his thigh bone. He comes to me for an artificial leg, which he fixes to his kneecap. The long coat enables him to carry off the fraud. A medal on his chest, a whine about Tevel-Kebr or Colenso, and the trick's done. For money making no pose can beat the 'soldier broke in our wars.' "Half the blind and one legged beggars can see as well as you or I. I can fit a blind man with everything from a dog and eye shade to Braille book in raised up characters. Dogs, of course, cost money, as they have to be specially trained. As a rule, the swindling 'blind man' hasn't got a dog. It's not necessary and a great expense, whereas a real blind man, if he hasn't got a child, must have one.

"Many sham cripples and 'blind' men are ex-criminals. A man who's been 'lugged' and done a long term of penal and doesn't like it fights shy of committing a second crime. But he says he can't get work as long as he's on ticket. As a rule, he makes a very successful beggar, for nothing sharpens a man's wits like jail."—London Letter in Los Angeles Times.

Cervantes and His Bride.

A biographer of Cervantes, the author of "Don Quixote," says: "With high ideals in his mind and but few pieces in his wallet, he married, on Dec. 12, 1584, with Donna Catalina de Palacios Salazar y Vozmediano. The tenth of his fortune, which Cervantes settled upon his wife, amounted to 100 ducats, while an inventory of the bride's effects include several plantations of young vines in the district of Esquivias, a small town of New Castle; six bushels of meal and one of wheat, some articles of household furniture, two linen and three cotton sheets, a cushion and two pillows stuffed with wool; one good blanket and one worn, tables, chairs, pots and pans, a brazier, a grater, several jars, sacred images in alabaster and silver gilt, a crucifix, two little images of the baby Jesus, four beehives, forty-five hens."

Restless Nature.

Nothing in nature is absolutely permanent. Changes are going on slowly, but steadily, every moment, parts of the earth being elevated above the sea, parts sinking below it, the ocean wearing away the coast in one place and building it out in another, and so on to infinity.

Fleiton.

"What are you writing, Hawley?"
"A story. I'm going in for fiction."
"Really? For a magazine?"
"No, for my tailor. He wants his money, and I'm telling him I'll send him a check next week."

The inventor is no longer invested with the pathos and romance of unrequited patience, but is the man of all others who leaps to eminence and fortune.—St. Louis Republic.

Wampum as Currency.

A curious old document showing how shells in the shape of wampum deteriorated as currency on Manhattan Island is found among the minutes of the court of burgomasters and schepens of May, 1650, at the meeting in Fort Amsterdam, New Netherlands. The account reads: "Whereas we see and for some time have seen the decline and depreciation of the loose wampum, among which is found much unpeeled and only half finished, made of stone, glass, bone, shells, horn—nay, even of wood and broken—therefore we have resolved that henceforth no loose wampum shall be current unless strung upon a wire. Trade wampum shall pass as good pay as heretofore at the rate of six white or three black beads for 1 silver (2 cents). Done, resolved and decided this 30th of May, 1650, at our meeting in Fort Amsterdam, New Netherlands."

Long Lived Carp.

The ordinary carp, if not interfered with, will, it is said, live 500 years. There are now living in the Royal aquarium in Russia several carp that are known to be over 600 years old, and it has been ascertained in a number of cases that whales live to be over 200 years old. A gentleman in London has had an ordinary goldfish for fifty-three years, and his father informed him that he had purchased it over forty years before it came to the present owner's possession.

The "King's English."

The following appeared as a London corner tailor's advertisement:

"A slap up fogs and kickshin builder, with upper Benjamin's snipped on a downy plank, with moteskins of hanky-panky design, with a double faked-down the sides and artful buttons at bottom, with kickshin cut peg top, half tight or to drop house over the trotters, with fancy vests made to flash the dickey or to fit tight round the scrag."

Comforting Him.

"And now," whispered the lover as he caught her in his arms, "what shall we do about the rope ladder? We shouldn't leave it hanging there."
"Don't worry about it," replied the eloping damsel. "Papa said he'd pull it up again so I couldn't get back."

Not Helelabe.

Daughter—Jack promised that if I accepted him he would mend his ways. Her Mother—Humph! I haven't much faith in this repairing done while you wait.
