DENTAL DECA'. Dean Holt in his book, "More Memories," tells an amusing story of how an old woman got the better of her clergyman in an argument.

Appendicitis is often due to bad teeth, said Dr. E. S. Thompson, lecturing at Gresham college, London.

"I see no evidence to show that our teeth are deteriorating to an alarming extent with the growth of civilization," he declared, and he pointed out that an even larger proportion of diseased teeth had been found among Egyptian and Roman remains than existed at present.

"Tobacco has an injurious effect on the digestion," he went on, "but I do not think that nicotine has any more effect on the teeth than alcohol. But tobacco certainly blackens the teeth and so causes many persons who are careful of their personal appearance to brush their teeth more often than they would otherwise do."

He had found cork liver oil amazingly successful in promoting the growth of teeth in children, and he recommended the toothbrush drill as part of the curriculum of schools.

Dr. Thompson also urged the practice of washing the teeth after meals and rubbing them twice a day, and particularly the last thing at night—London Mail.

A Disappointing Celebrity. An odd impression was made which George Elliot conceived of Schiller after her visit to Weimar with Lovell in the August of the year of "the union," 1791.

She was thrilled, she says, by the legend over the poet's old house, "Hier wohnte Schiller," but something in the nature of disillusionment awaited her within. It was very interesting to see his study, left in its original state. But when it came to his skull, "which we saw for the first time, we were amazed at the smallness of the intellectual organ."

After that she could take no further pleasure in the contemplation of the too flattering bust and portrait. And then "Ranck told that Schiller had a 'miserable Stimm'—a wretched forehead," while to complete the destruction of her ideal she heard how "Tieck, the sculptor, was wont to declare that something in Schiller's whole person reminded him of a camel."—Fall Mail Gazette.

President Hayes' Watches. President Hayes was in the habit of wearing a cheap nickel watch while in the White House, and much comment was aroused as to the reason.

The truth was that almost weekly a deputation of western Indians called upon him, always bringing presents of some kind to the great father. Of course he was expected to give something in return, and the object was to find something cheap and at the same time acceptable. Watches were a novelty to the Indians, and to present a chief with a watch which the great father himself had been carrying always impressed him greatly.

Having discovered this and not caring to distribute gold watches or even silver ones, Mr. Hayes hit upon the expedient of buying nickel watches at $3 a dozen and always made it convenient to have one with him against an emergency.

A Norway Legend. According to a work on Norway, the sentiment of the soil in that country is explained by some of the country people as follows: At the creation of the world the angels whose duty it was to scatter the soil forgot Norway. Seeing this, the guardian angel of the land made complaints to the Creator. What was to be done? Impossible to restart the whole of the creation for the sake of Norway. "Come, my little angels," said he, "look carefully and perhaps you may still find a little earth." The conscience stricken angels swept the floor of heaven, and the little dust they found they gathered in their draperies and scattered over the Norwegian rocks.

Faces and Feet. An English artist, writing in a London woman's magazine, says: "I do not know if any one has ever drawn attention to the fact before, that you can generally tell the shape of a woman's foot by her face. There is as much character in a foot as in a hand. You will generally find the round faced, short nosed little woman has the prettiest ankle and foot; the high cheeked, long nosed woman the ugliest. Women with very pretty faces seldom have pretty feet. Nature, somehow or other, compensates its daughters."

The Medicine She Wanted. Village Dame (describing various aches and pains)—My throat 'ed got tickle, tickle, tickle, till I see, 'I must be a-goin' to be ill.' So 'I olds un tight w' my 'and, but that didn't do no good; 'I puts my old stockin' round un, but that didn't do no good. So in the mornin' 'I talked it over w' Mrs. Giles next door, and we thought as we'd send over to the White 'Orse for three-pennorth o' gin, 'cos I see: 'Praps it may do 'I good and praps it mayn't. But even if it don't,' 'I see, 'you can't take it when you be dead!'

A Comparison. "Did you ever hear anything so idiotic as that talk of Mrs. Softer's when she is addressing her baby?" queried one woman of another on the street car. "Yes, I think I have," was the reply. "For heaven's sake, what was it?" "I once heard a fat man talking to his canary bird."—Chicago News.

Unfortunately Pat. "Uncle," said the impetuous nephew, "you ought to go and see the new play. You would just die laughing." The old man merely glared. In a few moments later there could be heard the sound of a scratching pen as he altered his will for the forty-fourth time.

Somewhat Mixed. A young man who was about to be married was very nervous and while asking for information as to how he must act up the question, "Is it customary to cuss the bride?"—Brooklyn Life.

Annals of the Year. The village churchyard was overcrowded except on its sunless northern side, in which the outside was buried. One day the vicar, while visiting a poor old woman who was high up to death, thought he would try to get her consent to be buried in the roomy northern plot. He began by assuring her that the common aversion to burial in any particular portion of consecrated ground was a silly prejudice and a foolish superstition. Then he besought her, as a personal favor to himself and as an example to others, to permit her body to be buried in the northern plot of the churchyard.

The old woman thought it all over for a few minutes and then answered, "Well, sir, as you seem to think as one part of the churchyard is as good as another and that it makes no difference where we be put, perhaps you'll gie us a lead."

The vicar did not grasp the argument, but he changed the subject.
