Be Amiable and Forgiving.

He whose misfortune it is to be revengeful is indeed an unhappy man. It keeps him busy all his days trying to "get even" with people, and the more he gets even the more rugged and corrugated becomes his path. A vindictive man is seldom a grateful man, for the quality of gratitude cannot exist where the opposite quality absorbs the whole being. Life is so short that we cannot afford to expend even a fraction of it in making it unpleasant for a fellow mortal. In nine cases out of ten the man with a grievance is the real offender. It is his own disposition that is deformed, and other things are made hideous by reflection from within. "He that studieth revenge," says Bacon, "keeps his own wounds green, which otherwise would soon heal," and further that "by taking revenge a man is but even with his enemy, but in passing over it he is superior." The person who invented the proverb "revenge is sweet," must have been a sort of savage devil, who delighted in iniquity. Revenge is always bitter. There can be no greater self-torment than a revengeful disposition, for it turns the poison of a rancorous nature in upon itself. According to Juvenal "Revenge" is the subject pleasure of an abject mind." It is best to be genial and pleasant, and if there is anything that rankles in your mind like a white-hot brand—forget it. —Punsutawney Spirit.

The world conference of farmers now being held in the city of Rome on the call of the King of Italy will without doubt result in great good to the interest of agriculture. The fact that crowned heads in other countries as well as the highest authority in our own land are taking so much interest in the products of the soil should awaken the tillers thereof to a fuller appreciation of their importance and arouse them as never before to a determination to put their business on the same basis with other interests of the land. To all who appreciate this and are wondering how and where to take hold we would suggest try the Orange — J. T. Allman, State Secretary of Orange.
