DREAM TIPS COSTLY.

Two Cases Where Those Who Got Them Lost Heavily.

One of the most remarkable instances in which a large sum of money was lost through putting too much faith in a dream occurred to a Colonel Booker, who related the facts himself to the present writer. In 1899 Colonel Booker was in Mexico City, and while there played roulette regularly in the casino. One night, after winning a fair amount, he retired to rest and had a curious dream. He thought he was coming out of the theater with a lady on his arm, when a cabman came up to him and asked him if he wanted a cab. The colonel turned to the lady and inquired if she would ride, but she declined, whereupon the cabman took a piece of chalk from his pocket and marked the colonel's sleeve with the number 11. Then Colonel Booker awoke, and was so much impressed by his dream that he believed he had received a bona fide "tip" to put his money on that number.

That evening he followed the nocturnal advice and lost, but so great a hold had the dream taken upon him that he continued to play the same number, and, though he lost nineteen times out of twenty, he persevered for several days, at the end of which time he found his losses amounted to $5,000. Then, like a wise man recovered from his foolishness, the colonel decided to "quit," and since then he has put very little faith in dreams as an aid to successful gambling.

But Colonel Booker's experience with nocturnal "tips" was by no means as disastrous as that of a certain rich young man at Monte Carlo some few years ago. This young fellow, whom we will call Smith, was a member of a well known and highly respectable Devonshire family. He had some "pace" and had lost a considerable amount in horse racing and gambling, when one night he had a dream which greatly impressed itself upon him and which was the direct means of his losing the remainder of his fortune.

He thought he was standing in the Avenue de l'Opera, Paris, when a police officer came along with a squad of gendarmes and halted within a hundred feet of him. He watched them idly and soon experienced an uncontrollable desire to find out how many were, but just as he began to count the officer issued peremptory commands, which were so promptly obeyed that the dreamer had no chance of satisfying his curiosity. Finally, however, the men stood in single file facing their officer, and Mr. Smith was just able to make out that there were twenty-seven in all when he awoke.

Being superstitious, like all gamblers, he at once saw in his dream the finger of fate silently pointing to twenty-seven as the lucky number, and the following day he was early at the tables and staked a large sum on it. Curiously enough, twenty-seven won twice in succession, and then the luck changed and he began to lose steadily. Most of that day he played his favorite number without success, and when the casino closed that night he had lost a considerable amount of money.

The next day he continued to play the same number, with the same result, and, to cut a long story short, that fatal twenty-seven ran away with every penny he possessed, and he was only prevented from shooting himself by an interested spectator who followed him out of the casino and by tact and the loan of a small sum induced him to face his misfortune like a man. Those to whom Mr. Smith afterward related the circumstances of the dream declared that he had made a mistake in not counting the officer as well as the gendarmes.—London Tit-Bits.

A Shocking Plant. It appears that a plant which grows in the forests of India, called the Philotaxa electrica, has the power to emit electric sparks. The hand which breaks a leaf from this plant immediately receives a shock equal to that produced by an induction coil. At a distance of six yards a magnetic needle is affected and will be deranged if brought near. The energy of this singular influence varies with the hour of the day. All powerful about 2 o'clock in the afternoon, it is absolutely annulled during the night. During rain the plant seems to succumb, and it bends its head during a thunder shower. It then remains without force or virtue even if sheltered by an umbrella. No shock is felt in breaking the leaves at that time, and the needle is unaffected beside it. Birds or insects never by any chance alight on the electric plant, an instinct seeming to warn them that they will find certain death there. Where it grows none of the magnetic metals is found, neither iron, cobalt nor nickel, an undeniable proof that the electric force belongs exclusively to the plants.

The Best Court of Appeal. No one could say a sharp or bitter thing with more absolute coolness than Lord Westbury, who was made lord chancellor of England in 1861. After retiring from the office of lord chancellor he took a very active part in the house of lords, sitting as a court of appeal, where his colleagues were Lord Chelmsford and Lord Colonsay. Lord St. Leonards, who was senior to them all, never attended. One day Lord Westbury chanced to meet him and said, "My dear St. Leonards, why don't you come and give us your valuable assistance in the house of lords?" "Ah," said Lord St. Leonards, "I should be of no use. I am old and blind and stupid."

"My dear lord," said Westbury, "that does not signify in the least. I am old, Chelmsford is blind, and Colonsay is stupid, yet we make the very best court of appeal which has ever sat in that assembly."

Give Your Farm a Name.

The practice the farmers are adopting of giving their farms a distinctive name, generally emblematic of some leading feature in connection with the premises, is a good one. Under such name the farm may always be known, no difference how often it may change ownership through sale or descent to heirs, and is readily recognized as to location the moment it is referred to. The name upon a sign board or a rural mail box is of much assistance, too, to persons traveling along and naturally desirous of knowing what place this or that is as they pass along. It's an all-right idea. Fall in with it.—Lock Haven Democrat.

Moral Standards.

It is a fact little recognized that the studies in morals change with changed conditions just as fashions in hats and shoes change with the seasons. What is regarded in one age and country as highly reprehensible is looked upon at another time with absolute indifference. Whatever is characteristic or customary in a country is approved, no matter how vigorously it may be condemned by people of other countries. Mankind is entirely too prone to make morals a matter of expediency.—Punxsutawney Spirit.
