

Pain in Head, Side and Back,

For years I suffered with pain in the head, pain in the side, and in the small of the back. I was nervous and constipated and could not sleep. The pills and other medicines i tried only made a bad matter worse. Then I tried Celery King. One package cured me and made a new woman of me.—Mrs. Th. Klee-hammer, Croton-on-Hudson, N. Y. THE INVENTOR.

No Protection For Him In the Courts

or the Patent Department. 'I happened to be chatting with Thomas A. Edison in his laboratory at Orange, N. J., one night while he was working on his most recent creation, the intensified dynamo," says a writer in Success Magazine, "and heard him discuss thoroughly the injustice that is done inventors in the United States. 'This very day,' he said, 'several of my well known patents expire and become the property of posterity, which means Tom, Dick and Harry. The government professes to protect the inventor for seventeen years and after that time his creation is no longer his own. But, as a matter of fact, the government does no such thing. It lets any poacher run in and bring suit or apply for an injunction, disputing the inventor's patent already granted by the patent office, and in all the courts. pending the long drawn out litigation which follows, the other fellow is permitted to go on manufacturing and selling the thing he claims to have in vented before the real inventor made

" 'Do you see that little lamp there?' nsked Mr. Edison as he arose full length in his ragged old linen duster of the workshop, and he pointed with his pencil to an ordinary incandescent electric light beaming brightly over a draftsman's table, 'It was my invention, known as a primary invention, because I took two things, a piece of metal and electricity, and made a third thing out of them-light, Now, I fought fourteen years in the courts for that little lamp, because a Frenchman bobbed up and claimed it after I had secured the patent. During all this litigation I had no protection whatever, and when I won my rights after fourteen years there were but three years of the allotted seventeen left for my patent to live. It has now become the property of anybody and everybody, There is no protection given an inventor by the courts or the patent depart-

He Found the Heirs.

The romantic story of how the late Dr. Arnold Pann, one of the foremost lawyers of Vienna, laid the foundation for his wealth is related in the newspapers of that city. About a quarter of a century ago a local jeweler named Ott died, leaving a fortune of 7,000,000 florins. He was a bachelor, and he left no will, nor were the courts able to find out the name or whereabouts of any of his relatives. Arnold Pann devoted himself to the task of finding them. For months he followed clews in Austria and Germany and was finally rewarded by finding not one or two, but thirty. The money was handed out to him to be equally divided among the claimants, while he himself, received 250,000 florins, a record fee. During the night when he had the seven millions in his house he appointed the thirty heirs guardians of the sum. Some of the heirs promptly squandered their shares, and one of them came back to Dr. Pann to see if he could not get another slice.

An Editor's Appeal.

What the editor wants is news, and ve are going to get it, too, and we want your help in the matter. If your wife knocks you down with a poker, let us know, and we will make it right with the public. If you have company, tell us, if you are not ashamed of your visitors. If a youngster calls at your home, begging for raiment, buy a box of cigars and come around, and we will find as suitable a name for him or her is the circumstances will permit, and if you have a social gathering of a few of your friends bring around a big cake, seven or eight pies and a ham, not necessarily to eat, but as a guarantee of good faith. The English, French and Music. M. Messager, the composer, r ently drew an interesting distinction between English and French audiences. "The French," he says, "are much more rapid in grasping the character of a musical piece. A Frenchman will go to an opera once, whistle its music next day and never wants to go to it again. Not so with the English. If they do not understand a piece on their first visit they do not condemn it, but they go again and even half a dozen times in some cases, until the melody soaks into them. In a French opera house one never sees a man or woman with the book or score, but in England I should think at least two-thirds of the audience follow a favorite piece with the book before them."

A landmark of Paris, dating from the city's most ancient days, is to disappear. This is the Street du Petit-Pont, which commemorates the struggles of the city against the Norsemen. There is today affixed to one of the structures in the street a tablet commemorating one of these encounters at a period so remote as 886. At the head of the Petit-Pont there then stood a wooden tower, and twelve men, whose names are preserved by the tablet, successfully held this tower against the entire Norman horde, which they thus prevented from gaining access to the city by the bridge.

Studying Nature.

The thing to sim at in studying the beauties of nature, as is the case with all artistic pleasures, is the perception of quality, of small effects. Many of the people who believe themselves to have an appreciation of natural scenery cannot appreclate it except on a sensational scale. They can derive a certain pleasure from wide prospects of startling beauty, rugged mountains, steep gorges, great falls of water-all the things that are supposed to be picturesque. But, though this is all very well as far as it goes, it is a very elementary kind of thing. The perception of which I speak is a perception which can be fed in the most familiar scene, In the shortest stroll, even in a momentary glance from a window. The things to look out for are little need s of light and color, little effects of chance grouping, the transfiguration of some well known and even commountace ofject, such as is produced by the sudder burst into greenness of the trees that peep over some suburban garden wall or by the sunlight falling by a happy accident on pool or flower .- Cornhill.

Why the Horse Heeds the Bugler.

An interesting report regarding the development of the musical sense in horses was made by a committee of German zoologists and botanists. The report says: "The investigations as to the musical sense of horses have shown that that sense is very poorly developed in these animals. It has been proved beyond doubt that horses have no notion whatever of keeping time to music, and that at circuses they do not dance according to the tune, but that the musicians have to keep time according to the step; of the animals, "Other investigations show that orses do not understand military trumpet signals. It is only the rider r the animal's instinct of imitation which induces horses to make the moves required by the signal, but no horse without a rider, however carefully trained, takes the slightest notice of a trumpet sign., and the same observation has been made on a large number of cavalry horses without riders."

Science of Bell Ringing,

It was Sunday morning, and the bell ringer had just finished ringing the chimes that called the godly to church. "Bell ringing is a science. Did you know that?" he said. "It is called campanology, and there are abstruce and technical terms in it, like 'Kent treble bob," 'Stedman eliques," 'double court bob,' 'dodges,' 'nolls' and 'stingoes.' Each of these terms defines a certain phase or kind of bell ringing. In England there is a society, the Central Connell of Bell Ringers, that every ampanologist desires ardently to be ong to. Maybe you think bell ringing is simple? Do you know what a peal is? A peal in ringers' parlance is a eries of 5,000 changes rung upon a chime, no change occurring more than once."-New York Press.

Children's Names In England. The vicar of Membury, Derbyshire, writes in his parish magazine, "A hundred and thirty-eight baptisms, and I have not yet had a 'Sarah Jane'-that delightful, old fashioned name!"

Amused, as ne said, by the vicar's sad wall, a parishioner replies to the vicar, saving the reason is not far to The custom of the parents residing in these parts is to consult with their incumbent regarding the choice of the name for the offspring.

The natural consequence is that all children born on a saint's day are called after the saint. Thus a girl born on St. George's day would be christened Georgiana and one on St. Clement's ay Clementing, and so on -London Express.

Although eels abound in Scotch waters and are caught in great quantities, they are not considered fit food there. No matter how plentiful and how very fine and large they may be in any district of Scotland, no native will eat one. The objection to the eel is said to be based on its serpent-like appearance and the fact that it is not overfastidious as to what it feeds on. Tons of choice eels for the London market are taken from streams that are not conspicuously free from sewage.

His First Intimation. "How did you find out you could draw?" inquired the admirer of the celebrated illustrator.

In "A Southern Girl In '61" Mrs. D. Giraud Wright describes the burial of the young hero. Latane, one of the most dramatic and touching incidents in the story of the Confederacy. He died leading a gallant charge.

"John Latane, a lieutenant in his brother's company, took charge of the body and, with a eart and driver, tried to return to Richmond. Finding this impossible, as the enemy were in possession of the country all around, he went to Westwood, the home of Dr Brokenbrough, who was then a sur geon in the army. The enemy approached, and he, to avoid canture, was obliged to leave his brother's remains and escape on foot. Mrs. Brokenbrough sent for an Episcopal clergyman to perform the funeral ceremonies, but the enemy would not permit him to pass. Then, with a few other ladies, a fair baired little girl, her apren filled with white flowers, and a few faithful slaves who stood rever ently near, a pious Virginia matron read the solemn and beautiful burial service over the cold, still form of one of the noblest gentlemen and most intrepld officers in the Confederate ar my. She watched the clods heaped upon the coffin lid, then sinking on her knees, in sight and hearing of the foeshe committed his soul's welfare and the stricken hearts he had left behind him to the mercy of the All Father."

Meaning of Surnames.

Nearly all surnames originally had a meaning. They were descriptive of their owners. In a word, they were nicknames, like "Skinny" or "Shorty" or "Pud."

Peel is a surname that shows the original Pell to have been bail. Grace means fat, from the French "gras." Grant, from "grand," means big. An Olipheat should be a clumsy and unwields person. This surname was "elephant" originally. The Parkers were keepers of noble-men's parks. The Warners we e war-reners, or rabble tenders. The Barkers prepared back for tanaling. The Lasoucheres were butchers. Bell meant bandsome. Cameron neant crook nosed. Curds meant polite. And Forster meant a forester Napler a servant in charge of the table linea, Palmer a pilgrim, Walawright a wagon builder, Walter a wall builder, Welster a weaver, Wright a carpenter. -Philadelphia Bulletin.

Substitutes For Tobacco. Sailors on long cruises cometimes exhaust their tobacco. Thence untold misery and many ingenious efforts to create a tobacco substitute. Tea and coffee make the best tobacco substiutes. They smoke freely in pipe or igarettes, and their taste and aroma are not unpleasant. But they burn the mouth and rack the nerves. Rose varn the untwisted parts of rope and oakum-is smoked by sailors as a last resort. Bark, peeled from the hoops of salt beef and pork barrels, is also smoked when the limit is reached. These things smoke abominably, and he black fumes that they give forth from the sailors' mouths are always ecompanied by oaths and impreca tions. Yet many a desperate sailor has smoked them in the hope of appensing his tobacco hunger.

St. Maurice.

St. Maurice, in Switzerland, is the name of a little station on the railway that leads up the Rhone valley from the lake of Geneva. The place gets its name as follows: Maurice was the officer second in command of the Thebaic logion, which the Emperor Maximian marched over the Alps in A. D. 302 to quell a rising in Gaul. At Octodurum artimy) the legion, every man of which was a Christian, was ordered to scriffice to the Roman gods for the eccess of the expedition. Headed by Maurice, they refused, marched off to Assummy (St. Maurice) and there were ce decimated to enforce submission. But they still refused, and finally the remainder were surrounded and cut down by the rest of the army.

Automatic Cooking Boxes.

Automatic cooking boxes were in general use among the Hebrews nearly 2,000 years ago. The Greek and Roman writers frequently refer to them. In his edition of "Juvenile," for example. Friedlander cites a commen tather who refers to "the Jews who a dry before the Sabbath put their viands but into the cooking boxes, the pots being covered with napkins and wrapped about with hay, so that they may have warm food on the Sabbath.

Always In Evidence.

"I notice," observed Tuffold Knust "that people don't pay no taxes on the cosillest things they's got." "How's that?" grunted Ruffon Wratz.

"Well, f'r instance, if you wuz wuth even a million you wouldn't have to pay nothin' on that peach of a nose you've got."-Chicago Tribune.
