A FUSS, AND THE RESULT. By HADDIE O'MAHON.

It was a spring day, not an ideal, but a real one, with a bitter penetrating wind that would have done credit to a day in midwinter...

Despite the fur-lined travelling coat, which reached almost to the end of her short skirt, she gave a little shiver as, dressing case in hand, she crossed the deserted platform and stepped into an empty car in the waiting train...

"And to think," she said, planting her dressing case on the seat beside her, brushing her hands in a huge fur muff, and addressing her sister who stood at the car door...

"It is horrible," agreed Dolly Desmond, sympathetically. Truth to tell, Dolly was of the opinion that the "abominable Miles" in question had an equal right to apply the adjective to Cynthia...

"So it would," declared Cynthia. "The further away I am from Miles the easier I shall find it to cultivate a spirit of peace and thankfulness..."

"Perhaps he couldn't get away just now," said Cynthia quickly, unwilling, woman-like, that anyone but herself should abuse the man she loved or had loved—she put it in the past tense now...

"Goodbye!" answered Cynthia, a little tearfully, leaning out of the window for a farewell kiss. "Take care of mother and keep the boys in order and enjoy yourself, and don't, don't be silly enough to get engaged to any man, be he angel in masculine form!"

"You could hardly suppose," he went on, indignantly, a slight angry flush arising on his cheeks, "that I should seek a three hours' tete-a-tete with you." "Certainly I should say it would be the last punishment for our sins that either of us would choose..."

Half an hour passed slowly by, and then Cynthia moved her book a quarter of an inch to one side and took a surreptitious peep at the faultlessly clothed length of limb and clean-shaven, resolute young face opposite...

Her eyes were full of tears as she turned over the pages of the magazine she was beginning to hate. She had read every bit of it. No, there was something she had not noticed before, only a little verse of Omar Khayyam's!

When the police burst into the flat they found Mohammed preparing to bowstring his wives. He was annoyed at being interrupted and turned upon the rescuers, fighting like mad. It took six policemen to subdue him...

Some one has been speculating about the importance of salt to civilization. The oldest trade routes are said to have been opened for salt traffic. Salt determines to a considerable extent the distribution of man...

There is some merriment in the English papers over John Burns' "bowler" hat. Mr. Burns, being a laborer and friend of laborers, shies at a silk hat, and there is consternation at the thought that he may wear the profane thing to the ministerial bench...

Of coincidences in names a correspondent of a London paper instances the following examples: There was a household in Clifton in which there were in domestic service Mrs. Pidgeon (cook), Mr. Partridge (lady's maid) and Mrs. Howke (charwoman)...

A few years ago George F. Haley, of Biddeford, was trying his first criminal case before the Supreme Judicial Court of Maine, with Chief Justice John A. Peters on the bench. Mr. Haley was in the middle of his plea when a man in the audience fell over in a convulsion...
