NATURE IN THE OCEAN.

Creatures Devouring Each Other to Prevent Overproduction.

It is estimated that the cyclops will beget 442,000 young in the course of the year, and if these were all permitted to mature and reproduce themselves the seas would in a short time be a simple mass of living organisms. But the cetechilus, or "whale food," constitutes almost the exclusive food of the vast shoals of herrings and the sea living salmon and salmon trout. Their existence is one of the greatest economic triumphs of nature, for these minute creatures scour the sea of its refuse and keep it sweet, while they form the food of fishes, which in turn furnish wholesome food for millions of human beings.

Feeding on dead vegetable and animal matter, these entomostraca are converted into the food fishes of the world by one remove, being first assimilated by the herrings, then absorbed by the tunny, cod, mackerel and other fishes which follow herring shoals and prey upon the latter. They mainly swim on the surface of the water, and it is the search of them in this position which brings the shoals of herrings to the surface. Their countless numbers are also augmented by the microscopic larvae of fixed shells, such as the barnacle, which begins life in this form first as a one eyed swimming crustacean, then growing a pair of eyes and finally affixing itself.

In rivers these larvae are the sole food of all young fish and often also of older fish. In early spring the creatures in every stage—eggs, larvae and perfect though microscopic entomostraca—swarm in the water, on the mud and on the water plants, and were it not for nature's provision for keeping them in check so rapid would be their rate of multiplication that the whole character of the water would speedily be entirely changed.

AIR IN HIGH ALTITUDES.

The Same as in Other Places, but it Contains No Microbes.

It is an error to think that the chemical composition of the air differs essentially wherever the sample may be taken. The relation of oxygen to nitrogen and other constituents is the same whether it is on the heights of the Alps or at the surface of the sea. The favorable effects, therefore, of a change of air are not to be explained by any difference in the proportions of its gaseous constituents. The important difference is the bacteriological one. The air of high altitudes contains no microbes and is, in fact, sterile, while near the ground and some hundred feet about it microbes are abundant. In the air of towns and crowded places not only does the microbe impurity increase, but other impurities, such as the products of combustion of coal, acetone also.

Several investigators have found traces of hydrogen and certain hydrocarbons in the air, especially in pine, oak and birch forests. It is to these bodies, doubtless consisting of traces of essential oils, that the curative effects of certain health resorts are traced. Thus the locality of a fir forest is said to give relief in diseases of the respiratory tracts. But these traces of essential oils and aromatic product must be counted, strictly speaking, as impurities, since they are apparently not necessary constituents of the air.

Recent analysis has shown that these bodies tend to disappear in the air as a higher altitude is reached until they disappear altogether. It would seem, therefore, that microbes, hydrocarbons and entities other than oxygen and nitrogen, and perhaps also argon, are only incidental to the neighborhood of human industry, animal life, and damp vegetation.—Chicago Chronicle.

Ancient Remedies For Hiccough.

The hiccough seems to be a modern and dangerous disease, but the ancients knew it and prescribed remedies that might now be tried advantageously. Galen recommended sneezing. Aetius approved of a cupping instrument, with great heat, to the breast. Alexander believed in an oxymel of squills. Alesbravicus made use of refrigerant draughts. Illanes put his feet in calefactants, such as emma, pepper, rue and the like in vinegar. Rhazes looked kindly on calefactant, antennum and carminative medicines.

Not Just What He Meant.

Lloyd George was addressing a meeting in Wales, and his chairman said: "You will be glad to see you in the member of the Government." Lloyd George has come here to reply to what bishop of St. Asaph said the other night about Welsh disestablishment. In my opinion, gentlemen, the bishop of St. Asaph is one of the biggest larks in creation. But he has his laugh in Lloyd George!"

Savored of the Truth.

"That's no lie," remarked the man with the newspaper. "What's no lie?" queried the other party to the dialogue. "This paragraph to the effect that 'wise men are more often wrong than fools are right,'" answered the other.—Chicago News.

Why Bodies Were Embalmed.

The Egyptians believed that the soul lived only as long as the body endured; hence their reason for embalming the body to make it last as long as possible. It is estimated that altogether there are 400,000,000 mummies in Egypt.

It is some compensation for great evils that they enforce great lessons.—Boyer.

Reynoldsville High School Alumni Songs.

Dear Old High School.

TUNE: "Swanee River."

Where storied on a green old hill-side
Old school we see,
Where gather learning's sons and daughters,
Thine's where I long to be.
There freely mingle high and lowly,
One busy throng.
Moved by an inspiration holy
Daily they pass along.

CHORUS :

Tho' afar I ever wander,
Mem'ry bears me still
Back fondly to the loved scenes yonder,
Back to the dear old hill.

In dreams I've seen the dear old faces,
Just as of old.
All 'round the dear familiar places,
Happy again I strolled.
Once more we set the echoes ringing,
From hall to hall;
Once more the good old songs we're singing
While morning sunbeams fall.

Each mem'ry to my heart grows dearer,
Thro' passing years,
While to my vision ever dearer
Each treasured scene appears.
All honor to our school home yonder;
Let praises swell.
Still may her loyal hosts grow greater,
Still will we love her well.

"There's Music in the Air."

There's music in the air,—
When the infant morn is nigh,
And faint its blush is seen,—
On the bright and laughing sky.

CHORUS :

Dear old high school, hear us sing,
Here us give you "ching ling ling!"
Hear us toast with words of glee,
To old high school "three times three."

There's music in the air
When the twilight's gentle sigh
Is lost on evening's breast
As its pensive beauties die.

He Stores Very Little Food For Use In Winter.

In Maine—in fact, all over New England—red squirrels do not put by great hoards of any kind for winter use. When a Maine red squirrel has filled itself with acorns and beechnuts it will hide a few here and there—under leaves, in hollow logs, in cracks of rifted trees and among stone heaps.

An average red squirrel during the run of an oak grove in the fall of the year, may in the course of two weeks hide away from two to four quarts of acorns, though they will be in perhaps twenty different places, and in no instance which we have noted has any nut been shelled.

The squirrel which plans a hoard of nuts and makes elaborate preparations for winter is the little chipmunk, or striped squirrel, which seeks winter quarters soon after heavy frosts and which remains in hiding all winter. The chipmunks often hide as many as two quarts of shelled beechnuts in one place. Their storehouses are, as a rule, under the ground, in sloping and sandy soil, the burrows having been dug with true engineering skill, so that no freshet can drown them out.

It is believed that most observing woodsmen will say that the red squirrels of this vicinity seldom make large caches of provisions for winter consumption and never shell the stored nuts. In fact, the red species have no need to pay much heed to such matters, as they are abroad and active in the coldest days of winter as much as they are in midsummer, so precautions for food are not demanded. As the red squirrels subsist for a good part of the year upon the cones of pines and spruces, which hang to the limbs, they do not care how deep or hard the snow may be, feeling secure in finding all the food they want among the tree-tops.—Bangor News.

"The Critics' Clothing" is an abused term about as much as the word "bargain". You never learn how good it is until you suddenly discover how bad it is; then you wish you had bought clothing with character to it.

CLOTHCRAFT is a recognized certificate of clothes supremacy; no better designing possible, here are skillful sewing, the best trimmings, perfect fitting, fantastically fashioned, conscientiously finished and every yard of CLOTHCRAFT cloth scientifically sponged to insure the necessary after-sold service. It is service that has made CLOTHCRAFT garments the finest, easiest and most popular sellers in the world, or as one clothier recently expressed it, "it is the critics' clothing" and the critic knows.

The profit is not all in the price,—but in our selling and—in your wearing it.
