Very curious is the method of fishing followed by the Chinese in the strait of Malacca. The fisherman lets down from the side of the boat a screen of white canvas stretched on wood. The shoal of fish mistake this for some floating obstruction and try to leap over it, with the result that the fish into the boat and are thus captured. This method is employed by Malays in their waters. What is claimed to be the best method of cooking potatoes has been discovered in a Missouri jail. A visitor to the jall noticed a convict drop something into a pot of boiling pitch which was being used in some work. Much to the visitor's surprise a well cooked potato was taken out a few minutes later and proved to have a flavor much better than as if it were cooked in the ordinary way. The potato had absoSALT METHODS.

In the Marshes of the Kongo and a Utah's Great Lake.

One of the sights of the Great Salt lake of Utah, developed by the progress of scientific industry, is the tem of immense salt making ponds on the shore of the lake. At Saltair the lake water is pumped into a great settling basin, where the impurities fall to the bottom and, containing much iron, form a reddish deposit. From this basin the water is drawn off into "harvesting ponds" averaging 90,000 square yards in area and six inches in depth. The ponds are kept supplied with water, as the evaporation goes on from May to September, when the salt harvest begins. The water having disappeared, a dazzling layer of salt two or three inches thick is found covering the bottom of the ponds, which is broken up with plows before being conveyed to the mills, where the final crushing and winnowing are done.

In general the salt marshes of the Kongo region represent a hind of pocket or rift in the soil. They are to be found in considerable numbers in the district of Sambalt, and there are also many of these marshes on the left bank of the river Lufubu. The walls of the rift show first a layer of blackish clay mixed with sand and contain ing numerous quartz and silex pebbles or more exceptionally black and white shells, fragments of oyster and mussel. Then comes a layer of stratified and gray blue schist. The soil of the depression also contains schiat as the greater constituent and is covered by a layer of sandy clay. In order to collect the salt the untives dig a funnel shaped hole from six to ten feet deep. The cavity soon fills up with a warm and clear water, which is strongly charged with salt. It comes up with constarable pressure, and the liquid seems to boil. The salt is partly precipitated at the bottom of the cav ity and mixes with the soil to form a blackish mud. The latter is washed out with hot water to extract the salt. which is then crystallized from the so-The product which is thus obtained is of a saity gray color, and its taste is more alkaline than that of European salt.

FRANKING.

The Way the Privilege Has Been Abused in Engined.

. American legislators are not the only ones who abuse their frankling privileges. Recent history in England has caused the London Chronicle to say: Franking had in birth, honestly enough, in 1000, in the desire to relieve members of parliament of the expense incurred in the discharge of their national duties, but the practice rapidly widened until it became possible for members to transmit their household goods at the public charge, as the following extract from old postoffice records testifies: 'Fifteen couple of bounds going to the that of Romans with a free pass, two maidservants going as laundresses to my Lord Am assador Methuen, Dr. Crichton, carrying with him a cow and divers necessaries; three suits of clothes for some policemon's lady at the court of Postment two bales of stockings for the use of the ambaranior to the crown of Portugal, a deal case with four fliteins of bacon for Mr. Pennington of Rollerdam.

"This form of abuse chal when t postoffice stable underweat a partieution, but it speadily cave place to an other variety. Members s. of letters wholesale, gave their away to their friends and sometimes paid their servants' wages in franked ouvelones. In fact they became a ble form of currency, subject to the art of the forger, who did a rotaling trade In 1715 424,000 worth of free cravespondence passed through the postof-

"Fifty years later the nation was staggered to discover that the amount had increased to £170,000, and stringent laws were passed to mitigate the immoral tendencies of the houses of parliament. But all was in vain until Sir Rowland Hill managed in 1830 to abrogate the privileges altogether."

Who first found tin? There is a legend among the Cornish miners that St. Piran, an Irish bermit, was the discoverer. His ancient church in the parish of Perranzabuloe, in Cornwall, laid bare of sand by the sea many venrs non has recently been repaired. Cornish miners still keep the feast of St. Piran, who, according to the fable, first found tin, forgetting that their forefathers had long previously sold it to the Phoenicians. Possibly the legend points to the fact that this Irishman was a skillful metallurgist.

The Modern Way and the Crude Methods of Early Days.

The sugar season opens a busy industry in Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont. Buckets are loaded on to the ox sleds, boxes of spiles and axes, and away to the sugar orchard!

Sugar making nowadays is a science. Only in the extreme rural sections still remain the wooden buckets and cedar spiles, but there is still a sugar warmth, a bursting of healthy joy that breaks forth just as the swelling buds on the maples.

No longer are there the crude methods of an open fire, of the kettles strung on green forked poles. Possibly sugar making has lost some of its genuine savor in the modern evaporators, but the product-and its commercial feature is of all importanceis finer grained, of purer color, freer from bits of bark and other foreign Important changes in the sugar industry have lessened the work of the farmer. In the early days wooden buckets and handmade cedar spiles were used. That made bother in the orchard, for the bucket had to be placed on the ground, and the spile could not be far above it else the wind would blow the sap to one side and thus waste it.

As the snow melted the spiles had to be drawn, new holes nearer the ground made and the bucket replaced.

Nowadays the spiles are of metal and the pails are hung on them. The evaporator is a sample of the rapid strides in sugar making facilities. The modern orchard has tin or galvanized pails and metal spiles.

Occasionally a tree runs a bucket full every fair day during the season. an average of ten quarts, although the general run is about half that amount. unless the weather holds so the trees run during the night.

Good, honest sirap weighs eleven pounds to the gallon, and it takes a barrel of thirty-two gallons of sap to make a gallon of sirup.

CARE OF CANARIES.

A piece of cuttle bone is needed al ways, and now and then a lump of sugar.

Guard the cage from draft, from exposure to cold at night and also from too much heat.

Canary seed principally should be given, though now and then a little rape seed is beneficial.

Do not use a painted cage. The bird will peck the cage more or less, and the paint thus imbibed is very injurious. The larger the cage the better it is for the birds, and if not new it should be scalded and well dried before putting them into it.

Avoid frightening the birds in any way. It is very easy to have them know you and welcome your coming. but they do not like to be handled.
