THE VILLAGE TUBAL CAIN.

Benner McCracken Revisits Old Scenes About Reynoldsville.

Benner McCracken and Lyman Scott got on the money at Eleanor. Benner carried in his hand a bunch of cobosh or snake root berries.

"Twenty-five years ago," said Benner, "Scott and I spent a winter in a shanty in the woods near the William Pifer farm cutting shingle timber. I got these cobosh berries on the site of the old shanty, and I'm going to take them back to Southern Pines, North Carolina, as a remembrance."

Benner was the village blacksmith in Reynoldsville thirty years ago, and the boys of that day regarded him with reverential awe as "In the fierce, red light of the furnace bright the stroke of his hammer rung." But nearly twenty years ago Benner pulled up stakes and went to North Carolina, where, with the aid of the genial sunshine, together with hoo-cake and moonshine whisky, he has managed to keep young. He is now visiting the scenes of his early triumphs in and about Reynoldsville, and for fear that he might get mixed up with John S. Smith, Ninian Cooper, Dave Reynolds and other turbulent spirits of the old days, and undertake to "paint the town," it might be well to put on a few extra policemen—Punxsutawney Spirit.

For People Who Appreciate Quality.

Cost of Paint

The difference between the cost of good paint and inferior paint is very little in comparison with the total outlay for painting a house.

The time and labor is the big item. Seems very foolish to spend a great deal of time and money putting on paint which will not last. It is much wiser to use old-fashioned "white lead and linseed oil."

Sterling

is the standard white lead; is perfectly pure, and is made by the best method—the Old Dutch Process.
