The management of the Pittsburg Exposition is to be congratulated on having secured Bostock's famous wild animal show for the remainder of the season. Bostock's animals are famed the world over. It was impossible to secure the show earlier in the season, until the managers had ended their long engagement in Boston. Immediately upon the close of the Boston Park where Bostock's show was on, the congress of Wild beasts were shipped to the Exposition and performances are now being given afternoon and evening, performances which are setting Pittsburg Exposition visitors wild with excitement. The immense Hippodrome has been converted into the animal arena—scores of immense cages having been erected last week and filled with the best of Bostock animals. Some of the most ferocious lions—twelve of them, to be exact, are among the most interesting and exciting of the acts. Can you imagine a small, delicate appearing woman of refinement entering a cage of twelve roaring beasts—all appearing as if ready to crush the life out of her with their immense paws? This little woman day in and day out enters the cage of the King Beasts, cowering them with but a mere glance and making them go through performances which even the wisest of dogs would hardly attempt. Aside from these lions are trained leopards, which have been trained by the world renowned Senorita Davila. Eight of the cat family are under her care night and day and the performance which she puts them through thrill one to the bone—and the shivers run down your back and make you marvel at the bravery of the woman. Equestrian bears and a mixed group of lions, pumas, hyenas and bear-hounds, all under the watchful eye of Mlle. Marcelle, furnish enough excitement for one evening while Charles Miller, the wonderful elephant trainer puts his three elephants through a series of tricks that is laughable and yet wonderful to behold.
