The John H. Sparks' Show.

Will exhibit at Reynoldsville afternoon and night of Thursday, June 20. The excellent reputation left by the Sparks' Shows on former visits to Reynoldsville would alone insure liberal patronage this time, but the lusty growth and vast improvements in the show since its last visit will make it more attractive than ever. Sparks is a man of energy and enterprise, wide experience and ample capital, and he has brought all this to bear in making his show superior to all other similar exhibitions. He has a brand new train of monster railway cars built especially for him, all new gorgeous cages, den, costly trappings, etc. He has engaged the best talent big salaries can procure. He has expended over $40,000 in increased equipment. Every effort has been made, regardless of cost, to make his show satisfying to his pride and advanced ideas. That he has succeeded is amply proven by the way the newspapers speak of his exhibition wherever he has appeared. It is the universal verdict that he has now the most splendid, complete and high-class exhibition of the kind in America.

Everyone should come to town in time to see the gorgeous parade at noon, and then follow the crowd to the show grounds and witness the big free exhibition.

JAMESTOWN EXPOSITION.

Not Yet Complete—August 1st Will be Soon Enough to Visit the Exposition.

The Jamestown Exposition is not yet completed and will not be until about the first of August. Some of the buildings do not have any exhibits in and others are only about half full of exhibits. Men are at work rushing things along very fast and will likely have it completed by the first of August, perhaps sooner. Most of the attractions on the War Path are now open, and as is the case at all exhibitions, some of them are excellent while there are others that are not worth the time or money.

We advise any of our readers who intend visiting the exposition to postpone their visit until August at least. September would be a better time. The managers of the exposition have decided to keep it open a month longer than was at first intended, therefore it will not close until the last of December, so there will be time enough to take the trip in the fall, a delightful season to visit the southland.

When the exposition is completed it will be worth the trip. Lodging and boarding can be secured at reasonable rates in Norfolk, seven miles from the exposition grounds, but some of the hotels on Pine Beach, near the expo grounds, charge most any price. They will "hold you up" if you will submit, but it is not necessary to pay exorbitant prices if a person will look for places where reasonable rates can be gotten.

The Jamestown Exposition is held to commemorate the 300th anniversary of the first permanent English settlement in America. It is located on Hampton Roads, close to Norfolk, Portsmouth, Newport News, Hampton, Fortress Monroe and Old Point Comfort. A delightful section of historic Virginia.

To go from here to Washington, D. C. by rail, spend a couple of days in that beautiful city sight seeing, and then take the trip down the Potomac river and Chesapeake Bay on a boat in daylight makes a most delightful and interesting journey. You pass Alexandria, Fort Washington, Mt. Vernon, Fortress Monroe, Old Point Comfort and other historic points en route. It is 106 miles from Washington to Norfolk on the water and requires twelve hours to make the trip one way. You can leave Washington in the morning and arrive at Norfolk in the evening, or leave Washington in the evening and arrive at Norfolk next morning.

Monday of last week was Georgia Day at the Exposition and President Roosevelt, whose mother was born in Georgia, visited the Exposition. The day was celebrated in a manner that was grander and more magnificent in its scope than any previous observance of its kind in the history of this or any other exposition. With the assembled fleets of seven nations joining in a national salute from each of the forty vessels as President Roosevelt, standing upon the bridge of his official yacht, Mayflower, steamed in view between their columns on Hampton Roads Monday morning as the opening feature, the day progressed with increasing pageantry until the climax came at night with a spectacular illumination of every warship and hundreds of pleasure craft and the entire grounds, and all buildings of the Exposition, while scores of searchlights flashed their dazzling beams across the blackness of the heavens.

The editors were put on board a special steamer which followed the President's yacht through Hampton Roads and when all the warships "let loose" it surpassed any Fourth of July cannonading we have ever heard.

President Roosevelt delivered two speeches, one in the forenoon to the public in general from an immense grandstand and the other in the afternoon in the auditorium to members of the National Editorial Association, the Pennsylvania State Editorial Association and other newspaper representatives. The editors were given tickets for reserved seats for both speeches and the editor of THE STAR was fortunate enough to get seats close to the speaker's stand both times and could distinctly hear every word.

In the midst of the Georgia Day speech the President stopped for a minute, smiled, bowed and waved his hand. He then apologized by saying that some one in the vast crowd had held up two babies for him to notice and he had to stop his speech long enough to take notice of them.
