

Pretty Window Exhibits.

There is a stuffed animal exhibit in the windows of the Stoke & Feicht Drug Company that recalls the pioneer days when the primitive wild animals ranged the forest. There are several species of the fox, a loon, several kinds of birds, deer head, weasel, and most remarkable of all, a baby tiger actually born in Reynoldsville. A circus passed through here twenty years or so ago and while here one of the tigers brought forth a litter, one of which died and was stuffed.

In the window of McEntire's pharmacy there is a picturesque representation of early days with its backwoods cabin, situated in the mountains with overhanging pine trees and rude appearance in general. It gives an excellent picture of life in Reynoldsville half a century ago.
