

PENNSYLVANIA DAY

Relics of Quakers.

Much space is given over to the history of the Quakers, who were among the earliest settlers in Pennsylvania. There is a photograph of the Caleb Pusey house, built in 1683, which stands to this day and is the oldest house in Pennsylvania. In this house William Penn was entertained.

The Quaker case contains old silhouettes. An odd engraving, made by Hemskirk, of a Quaker meeting in London about 1680 hangs on the corner post. There are two valuable engravings made from paintings by Benjamin West and his family, one in 1770; the other of Penn's treaty with the Indians, 1681. Of this early artist's work two originals are shown, his first painted portraits. They are portraits of children, made about 1750, when West was only seventeen years of age, prior to his election to the presidency of the Royal Academy.

Along the side wall is a showcase containing many ancient documents relating to the history of old Chester county, and above it hangs a portrait of the Quaker philanthropist, Lucretia

Mott, painted by William Furness, brother of the great Shakespearean scholar, Horace Howard Furness.

Along the top of the rear wall is a long row of oil portraits of the governors and other early officials of the state.

In the center of the rear wall is a handsome painting of William Penn in armor at the age of twenty-two. There is also a glass case, known as the Penn case, which contains many parchments, deeds and other manuscripts signed by Penn and his sons.

Pennsylvania's Germans.

Very naturally one entire corner of the Pennsylvania space is given over to German history. One case is devoted to the Ephrata Cloister, that peculiar religious sect established in Lancaster county about 1740. Many old exhibits may be seen in this case, among them an old wooden communion

Nervous Exhaustion From Hard Work

The story that Mrs. B. E. Smith of 222 Bird Ave., Buffalo, N. Y., tells of the complete recovery of her niece from a most deplorable condition of extreme weakness and nervousness only goes to prove the wonderful power that Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills have over all nervous affections. So complete and full is the statement of the case and the splendid recovery that we need only quote her own words. This lady says: "My niece, a young lady of 22 years of age, was in a deplorable condition from nervous exhaustion, the result of hard general work. Her general make-up was of the high strung nervous kind—the appetite was poor. The head ached constantly—no rest at night—the heart action was very weak—the slightest exertion bringing on pain about the heart and palpitation. She grew very weak and lost weight rapidly. I heard of the splendid work of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills in such cases and procured some, and I am pleased to say they acted finely—she soon rested easily at night—the headaches stopped—she picked up in weight—the appetite was good, and, in fact, the change on the whole was most marked and gratifying. As a consequence of this splendid result I can conscientiously and heartily recommend the medicine to others in similar cases. 50c a box at all dealers or Dr. A. W. Chase Medicine Co., Buffalo, N. service and wooden pillow upon which these ascetics rested the head while sleeping. This strange people had a well equipped printing establishment in operation, and a rare copy of the "Martyr Book" printed there in 1748 is shown. Copies of this book are particularly rare for the reason that during the Revolutionary war they were confiscated by the Continental forces and the paper used for gun wads. Many photographs of the old buildings and grounds where these people lived and worshipped according to their peculiar ideas are shown.

A case contains documents and relics from the German counties, among which are some samples of glassware manufactured by Baron Stiegel in 1750 and some ancient tiles from his house at Mannheim, Pa. A thing which attracts the attention of every visitor is a model of the first telephone, made by Daniel Drawbaugh.

A copy of Barbara Fritchie's Bible dated 1771, and a photograph of her baptismal record, 1767, are of interest to the admirers of this good woman.

There is a collective exhibit which covers well the history of agriculture in Pennsylvania's numerous valleys and sects—the Moravians. This was a very intelligent sect of Germans of which the Count and Countess Zinzendorf were the founders.

They made two settlements in the state in 1742, one of which was called Bethlehem and the other Nazareth. On the walls are photo engravings and oil portraits of the leading elders, all of the paintings being from the brush of Haffel and made prior to 1760.

The Moravians.

Two cases are given over to the history of the Moravians, and the exhibit includes some excellent maps of the owns and a unique collection of manuscripts and letters. In this collection are an original manuscript diary by Conrad Weiser, the famous Indian interpreter, and a letter from George Washington to the Moravians; also many of David Zetserger's manuscripts.

There are two novelties in the way of musical instruments, one of them a harpsichord, made by the Moravians at Bethlehem prior to the Revolution, the strings of which will still give out a faint sound when the keys are touched. The other is a violin carved by Johann Antes back in the seventeenth-fifties. A photo facsimile of the first protest made in America against slavery may be seen hanging from one of the columns.

There is a most interesting collection of early Pennsylvania German imprints. In this case is an original copy of the first Bible printed in a European language on the American continent. The work was done by Christopher Sauer at Germantown in 1743. In a case relating to early Germantown history are a boy's suit over 150 years old and some photographs of men and houses famous in the history of the town.

In the center of the Pennsylvania space are grouped many novel and interesting exhibits, including ancient colored manuscripts and old firebacks, made by Pennsylvania Germans about 1740; early colonial costumes, bonnets and linen which belonged to leading people of the time; old watches, needles, spectacles, buttons, ballroom slippers, shoes and hats. A collection of household utensils includes the ancient pewter and that peculiar product known as tulip ware which the Pennsylvania Germans manufactured so largely.

High up, next to the ceiling, are arranged on the rear wall of the exhibit space specimens of household, farming and fighting instruments of the seventeenth century, and the last of the interesting and instructive exhibits to be dealt with in this article are samples of the early needlework done by the women of the state, which hang upon a center column.

GROWTH OF COMMERCE.

Uniquely Exhibit by State of Pennsylvania at Jamestown Exposition.

Fleeting centuries are as but a day in the all absorbing corner of the Education building at the Jamestown exposition, wherein is displayed the magnificent exhibit of the Commercial museum of Philadelphia. Under the auspices of the Pennsylvania state commission. There one may in imagination barter with the Phoenicians of 500 years before Christ in the commercial exchange of pearls, gold dust, tin, alabaster, malachite, figs, dates, almonds, fine linen, myrrh, sandalwood, dragon blood, olive and palm oil and slaves, samples of each of these and many other articles of Phoenician commerce being on exhibition in this section, the slaves being represented by miniature figures, and it is noticeable that their color was not always black.

Thus the commerce of the passing centuries passes in review, and to the limited articles of trade of the Phoenicians are added in the early centuries of the Christian era such things as silk, hog bristles, cork, lemons and oranges, tea, rice, beads, etc. There the Romans appear as the bright and shining stars in the commercial world, the Phoenicians and Egyptians having given way to the sway of the Caesars. With the Romans came such articles of commerce as salt, wrought iron, brass, sheepskin, ivory, camels' hair, raisins, sponge silk, aloes, oak galls, honey, figs, spikenard and dates.

The exhibit of articles representing the trade of nations, interesting in the extreme though it is, would not be complete without the accompanying exhibit, showing by photographic representation and model the various methods or means of transportation of commerce past and present. Upon the walls of the section allotted to this exhibit are hung representations of the handcars of Japan, the laden ponies of Asia Minor, the yak wagons of Tibet, the ox carts of India, the dromedaries of Spain, the camels of Egypt, the dogs and reindeer of Alaska and Siberia, the llamas of the Andes, elephants of Ceylon and scores of other equally interesting and unique representations of commercial ways and means. Then there are reproductions of fast flying freight trains of different nations and models of water craft used in commerce from ancient to modern times.

These models are in themselves worthy of hours of study. There are Venetian galleys, Arabian dhows, the decks of the Norsemen, Egyptian galleys, Malay praus, Arabian balsas, Japanese Junks, Phoenician galleys, Babylonian sea horses, Egyptian triremes, Spanish galleons and caravels, Italian nef, Dutch galleons, Polynesian sea canoes, New Caledonia prau and American clipper.

The exhibit is one of comparison and contrast, a grand lesson in the study of commerce and commercial relations, the whole giving a vivid impression of the mutual interdependence of nations of the present day.

THE U. OF P. EXHIBIT.

Pennsylvania's Great College Wall Represented at Jamestown.

Guarded by two bronze wrestlers and artistically decorated with the college colors, the exhibit of the University of Pennsylvania in the Education building at the Jamestown exposition is one of the most complete in the division.

The exhibit occupies one entire corner of the building. Along one side are heavy bookcases containing specimen volumes from the university library.

On top of the cases are numerous busts and bronze figures, many of priceless value, while on the wall above is a very fine collection of maps, charts and pictures illustrative of the work of the institution.

High up on the wall on a little shelf is a massive bust of Benjamin Franklin, founder of the university. On one of the bookcases there are two bronze figures modeled after statues found in the ruins of Herculaneum, which was destroyed by Vesuvius.

What has proved of great interest is a model of the first college buildings, plain and crude, constructed in the early days of the institution. In contrast with these buildings are snow pictures of the magnificent equipment of the present day, which is equal to that of any like university in the country.

A tale of Red Taps. Among the tales of red tape the following should hold a high place: M. Roger Cavallion, a young French gentleman rider, who had won his hundredth steppelchase, was drawn for the cavalry and had to serve for a year. He asked to be placed in the cavalry, explaining with due modesty that he was not unknown as a horse man. The military council of revision refused the request on the ground that as his period of service was only one year he would not have time to learn to ride.

These who occupy their heads too much with small matters generally become incapable of great.—La Rochefoucauld.

MRS. SARAH J. WINDROM

Mrs. Sarah J. Windrom of Chicago, cousin of Zachary Taylor, twelfth president of the United States, and grandniece of Alexander Hamilton, who signed the Declaration of Independence, says:

"Vinol is a Godsend to old people. I am 76 years old, but have a hearty appetite, sleep soundly, and feel active and well today, thanks to Vinol. When I was young cod liver oil was dispensed in a greasy, unpalatable form, and it fairly gagged me to get it down. Vinol is entirely different, very palatable and nourishing to impoverished blood. It is the finest tonic and strength creator I ever used in my life."

Vinol is a real cod liver preparation, from which the useless oil has been eliminated and tonic iron added. Try Vinol on our guarantee.
