THE MID-WINTER OUTING.

This is the time for the mid-winter outing. A dash of summer in the midst of winter is an agreeable variation. It makes for health and pleasure and stimulates vitality.

For the extended trip, Southern California, the fruit and flower land of the Pacific coast, offers unrivalled attractions.

For the fortnight's trip, Florida, the summer garden of the Northern winter, bids you come and enjoy its genial sunshine, its tropical scenes and its out door life.

For the ten days' outing, Pinchurst, Camden, Aiken, Augusta, Southern Pines, and other popular resorts in the pine belt of the Carolinas and Georgia offer many inducements.

For the short trip-the week end outing-Atlantic City is always attractive. The same breezes that depress the thermometer in summer seem to keep it up in winter. It offers great, hotels on the ocean's edge, out-of-door life on land and sea, and a climate full of snap but shorn of the winter severity.

Before deciding on your midwinter outing, consult a Pennsylvania Railroad Ticket Agent and get a Pennsylvania Railroad Winter Excursion Book. Whether you select California, Florida, the Carolinas, or Atlantic City, the Pennsylvania Railroad offers a comprehensive train service, reasonable rates and ticketing arrangements, and the best facilities that modern transportatiou methods can provide.

LYDIA DARRACH.

Loxley House, Philadelphia, Where She Played Enverdropper.

One of the favorite stories connected with the Revolution is the tale of Lydla Darrach's patriotism, which story, like others of similar import, has been discredited by the discriminating historian. Notwithstanding the cold douche thrown upon the tradition it remains popular with all who know it. The house where the famous cavesdropping on the part of the Quakeress took place is not so well known,

Those who have heard or read the story of Mrs. Darrach hardly need to be informed that she and her husband lived in what was called the Lexley house, once at the southeast corner of Little Dock and Second streets. Little Dock was the thoroughfare which runs in a southwestern direction from Dock street to Second street. The ground upon which the Loxley house stood was acquired by Renjamin Loxley, a well to do carpenter, who owned practically a whole square in this vicinity from George Clymer in April, 1750, and the queer little house was erected immediately. It was a speculation, for there is nothing to show that the owner ever lived there

The house gained its fame from its neenliar facade, which was unlike anything in the city, and from the anec dote which connects Mrs Darrach with the place. The great preacher Whitefield is said to have addressed the multitudes from the balcony on either his sixth or seventh visit to this country-1763 or 1769.

The Revolution had long since been over and most of the patriots in their fore the tab rach's bold adventure, which is believed to have saved Washington and his army from capture by the British, became known. In the first number of the first volume of the American Quarterly Review, issued in March, 1827 the tale was told for the first time. There it is credited to "Carden's Anec dotes of the American Revolution." The author of the story in the Amercan Quarterly Review, however, must have had access to Major Garden's manuscript, for the story was not published in his book until the second series was issued in the latter part of the year 1828 .- Philadelphia Ledger.

STORIES OF TENNYSON.

Showing Some of the Odd Ways of the Famous Poet.

In the memoirs of the late William Allingham, the English poet, appear some interesting reminiscences of Tennyson. Allingham's first sight of him was at Twickenham, where Tennyson was then llving. He says: "Soon came in a tall, broad shouldered, swarthy man, slightly stooping, with loose dark hair and heard. He wore spectacles was obviously very nearsighted. and Hollow cheeks and the dark pallor of his skin gave him an unhealthy appear-He was a strange and almost ance. pectral figure. The great man peered se at me and then shook hands cor-Hally, yet with a profound quietude of manner. He was then about fortyone, but looked much older.'

In 1886 Allingham visited Tennyson it the latter's home, Farringford, In Freshwater, Isle of Wight. One morning they were talking on the downs to gether, and Allingham said that he felt happy. Tennyson said gloomily, "Pm not at all happy-very unhappy." The reason, as Tennyson afterward explained, for his particular unhappiness was his uncertainty regarding the condition and destiny of man. Allingham was very anxious to photograph him on HORSE SENSE.

I wonder if any one can give a reasonable excuse for watering horses as soon as they have finished a meat or just before going out for a drive, says a writer in Suburban Life. In the first place, the oats are washed out of the stomach into the intestinal canals, where they cannot be digested and must be an active irritant, and, in the second, a stomach full of water makes a horse dull and logy. A little at a time and that often is a good rule in watering stock.

Did you see that warning signal which nature threw out the other day as you stopped your horse for a mo-As soon as it halted one forefoot was thrown forward because something was wrong and there was pain.

If you had examined the animal you might have found some heat about the coronet or some sensitive ness along the muscles of the put of about the ankle. Your friend says, "Call a veterinary and have him nerved."

A better way is to stop using for a few days, remains the shoes and let the horse stand on peat moss if an earth floor is not to be hall. 'Of course the ain ration must be greatly reduced field bran mushes substituted.

Then see if the mode have been cut so low as to strain the mandles of the log or the toes left long to haure more strille or the foot is not properly balmural. "No foot, up horse," is an old nditige

Why not take nwee those cribs and her your horse in "I from the floor? It will require more time for it to consome a meal, but that is couldy no objection, and the animal's direction will be improved.

How about that have which is so ravenous for grain ; Did gun ever try one of those crilis with cups to prevent difing of the goals, or have you excrimented by acattering the oats ong the side of the stall floor so they must be enten slowled Any device which necessitates twice the time usually consumed in putting away a ration of grain will materially ald the appearance, service and condition of a horse

Do you stay with your horse while he is being shod? How, then, do you know that he is being kindly treated? I saw a good smith strike a horse over the head the other day with his rasp, and the marks of that blow will remain for weeks.

Many valuable animals have been permanently injured by such blows ven under impulse, the result of vexattents switching of tail or struggling. No saue man will allow the connecting hoof structure between the wall of the foot and the frog to be cut away simply to give a more pleasing appearance. By this one makes certain contraction of the heels, with all its attendant permanent ills. This tissue is the natural hoof expander and as such must be closely guarded.

One of the most successful stage drivers of the old time told me years ago that a horse would last a third longer and do better service if its harnees fitted in every part, and I think he was right. Take a look the next time you drive out and see if the horse is the right distance from the carriage to insure the minimum of force in moving and yet not hit. If the collar fits, the breastplate or holdback is not too high or low or the saddle too far forward. A business man or, better still, a woman will at a glance detect

GARABALDI'S WOOING.

Riberas Was With and Wedded.

The whole life of the great italian liberator Gurlbaldi was one of roman tle adventure, but nothing else in it was more romantic than his wooing, which is described in his own narrative. He had been driven from Italy in 1836 and landed in South America. where he joined the struggle then being carried on by several small states against the empire of Brazil. He had with him many devoted comrades, whom he loved with his whole heart. One day, however, he was shipwrecked on the Brazilian coast of Santa Catharina, and several of his dearest irlends were drowned in getting to shore. The survivors at once joined the local army, led a successful attack on Laguna and were halled as liberators. Caribaldi was made chief of the captured Brazilian fleet. He paced up and down the deck of his tiagship, but in no victor's mood. The loss of so many friends had filled him with melancholy, and he began to feel his loneliness. His mind turned to a natural remedy. He determined to seek a bride among these people who so idolfzed him.

"The loss of Luigi, Edoardo and others of my countrymen," he wrote in his own story, "left me utterly isolated. I felt quite alone in the world. I needed a human heart to love me, one that I could always keep near me. I felt that unless I found one at once life would become intolerable.

"By chance I cast my eyes toward the houses of the Barra, a hill on the south side of the entrance to the lagoon, where a few simple and picturesque dwellings were visible. Outside one of these by means of my telescope I espled a young woman, and forthwith I gave orders for my boat to be got out, as I wished to go ashore." This girl was Anita Riberas, eighteen years old, a young woman of unusual beauty, of great bodily strength and endurance and of an unusually fine type of intellect, as romantic as Garibaldl and as untiring as he in her labors for liberty. "I landed," says Garibaldi, "and, mak ing for the houses where I expected to find the object of my excursion, I had just given up hopes of seeing her again when I met an inhabitant of the place whose acquaintance I had made soon after our arrival. He inited me to take coffee in his 1. use. "We entered, and the first person who met my eyes was the damsel who had attracted me ashore. We both remained enraptured and silent, gazing on one another like two people who meet not for the first time and who seek in each others' faces something that will make it easier to recall a forgotten past. At last I greeted her with the words in Italian, 'Thou oughtest to be mine."

"My insolence was magnetic. I had formed a tie, pronounced a decree, "hich death alone could annul."

The young woman was at that time betrothed by her father to a wealthy suitor whom she had refused to marry. As her father and the sultor were determined, however, and she had no option the arrival of Garibaldi must have been extremely welcome. In a moment she had given her life to him.

Her father refusing to change her destiny, Garibaldi came ashore with a small party a few nights later and carried her off by force-with her entire consent-and they were married
