CONGRESSMAN THOS. CALE.

Hon. Thos. Cale, who was elected to Congress from Alaska, is well known on the Pacific slope, where he has resided. His Washington address is 1312 9th St. N. W., Washington, D. C.

Washington, D. C.
Peruna Drug Co., Columbus, Ohio.
Gentlemen: I can cheerfully recommend Peruna as a very efficient remedy for coughs and colds.

Thomas Cale.

Hon. C. Sleepy, Congressman from Virginia, writes: "I have used your valuable remedy, Peruna, with beneficial results, and can unhesitatingly recommend your remedy as an invigorating tonic and an effective and permanent cure for catarrh."

Husband—Darling, I'm too tired to go to that dance tonight. Do you mind going alone?

Wife—Why, no. But when I get home where shall I leave the latch-key?

The very wisest advice: take Garfield Tea whenever a laxative is indicated! Pleasant to the taste, simple, pure, mild, potent and health-giving. Made of Herbs—not drugs.

How Caterpillars Build.

Many clever caterpillars which dwell habitually in company build a common nest for the common benefit. Of these is the famous American tent caterpillar. The tents are really nests of silk spun among leaves and twigs. In them the caterpillars dwell when young, and to them they resort for shelter in rainy weather even when larger grown. Allied species which pass through the winter in the caterpillar state construct winter sleeping places which the bookish folk call hibernacula. These are often conspicuous among the branches during the cold months of the year. If torn open they reveal a surprising thickness of spun silk forming a dense nonconductive wall. At the center of the mass lie from thirty to fifty tightly packed caterpillars waiting for the return of the warm weather, when they will resume their feeding.

Mental Maladies Yield to New Form of Treatment.

Paris.—Some interesting experiments in ascertaining the effects of colors on various diseases have been taking place at a hospital for mental maladies. Special rooms were furnished with blue, red or violet blinds, the walls being painted with the same respective colors.

The following results were obtained: In a blue room a person who was in a great state of nervous excitement became completely calm; in a red chamber a patient stricken with melancholia and suicidal tendencies became gay. This is contrary to the effect which the color red produces on certain animals, which it drives to savagery. In a violet room a maniac entirely recovered his calmness of mind.

PANTRY CLEANED

A Way Some People Have.

A doctor said:—
"Before marriage my wife observed in summer and country homes, coming in touch with families of varied means, culture, tastes and discriminating tendencies, that the families using Postum seemed to average better than those using coffee."

"When we were married two years ago, Postum was among our first order of groceries. We also put in some coffee and tea for guests, but after both had stood around the pantry about a year untouched, they were thrown away, and Postum used only."
"Up to the age of 28 I had been accustomed to drink coffee as a routine habit and suffered constantly from indigestion and all its relative disorders. Since using Postum all the old complaints have completely left me and I sometimes wonder if I ever had them."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

OUTSIDE the window the snow came steadily down in great soft flakes, while inside the hickory fire blazed in the wide chimney, now and then throwing out sparks across the hearth rug where Teddy Truesdale lay, with Keep, the curly haired collie.

"Holidays is awful stupid," said the little boy presently, "if people won't let you go out or make snow-balls or anything. An' the big boys is out. I'd rather learn lessons than stay in the house."

"Do you know what holiday this is?" asked Grandpa Halsey, who was reading near the window.

"Just Lincoln's Birthday," answered the little boy, carelessly, "and he wasn't anything but President. Presidents happen most any day. Wish I was at school."

Grandpa Halsey smiled as he laid down his book. "Presidents may happen every day," he said, "but Lincoln don't. Let me tell you some-possession of the rude sketch. He was never too busy, this great hearted man, to do a kind thing, however small it seemed.

"Even when he was a boy he was always on the side of the 'under dog,' as we say, and sympathized with all suffering, for he had known so much of it in his own life. He was very poor, you know, and had to work early and late and hard for the barest livelihood. What would you think of living in a cabin where the wind whistled through the chinks, rough leather hinged boards took the place of window sashes, and, when visitors came, which happened only a few times in the year, raw potatoes were pared and washed and handed around for refreshments? The family were too poor to afford anything else."

"Lincoln himself never had any stockings until he was nearly a man grown. Rough cowhide boots, deer-skin leggings and coonskin cap were the best his boyhood ever knew. For pins he used the long thorns of the haw and bean locust, and his coffee was made of rye bread crusts."

"But 'Young Abe,' as he was called in those days, was as ambitious as he was poor. He would walk miles and miles after his hard day's work was over to borrow some book—a grammar or an arithmetic or a history—which he had heard of some neighbor possessing. Then he would read and re-read and study it, until he had mastered every word, sitting up far into the night to work out examples by the light of the pinewood fire. Paper was too expensive in those days for a boy as poor as Lincoln to think of owning any, and slates were unheard of where he lived. But he used smooth boards instead, and bits of charcoal for pencils, planing the boards off when the sides were all covered with figures.

"Do you think you would ever want to learn enough to take so much trouble?"

Teddy shook his curly head soberly. He was very much interested by this time, and one or two of the other children, who had run in out of the snow to get warm, had also stopped to listen to grandpa's story.

"Often, too," the old man went on, "they could not get their meal ground at a mill, and 'Young Abe' would have to grind all the corn, ear after ear, on a big iron grater, something like those we use for nutmegs now. The only bed he had in those days was one made of big slabs hewn from trees and covered with hay or straw, and he paid for his first suit of 'blue jeans' at the rate of 400 rails a yard."

thing about him, and then I think you'll be glad to have him remembered by a holiday, even if he does keep you in the house."

Teddy was interested at once. "Tell me 'bout when he was a little boy," he said.

"Very well," answered grandpa, "though I didn't know him then. The first time I ever saw him I went with a number of friends to Washington to consult the President about a certain man for an office in our State. But we all had to wait until the great man had finished a picture he was drawing for the little daughter of one of the laboring people about the White House. He had started to put her down from his knee when our party was announced, but she begged so hard to have him finish 'just that one doggie,' that he smilingly said he hoped we wouldn't care, and sent the little maiden away happy in the Lincoln's Happiest Days.

Abraham Lincoln often said in after years that the days at the rock spring farm near Hodgenville were the happiest of his life, for they were his only play days. After the family left there and moved into Indiana he, though only nine years old, began to work on the farm. There he became a rail splitter, using his moments of rest in the work of study. After the day's labor he studied by firelight.

Reply to an Office Seeker.

An office seeker once claimed that he had made Lincoln President.

"You made me President, did you?" said Lincoln, with a twinkle in his eye.

"I think I did," said the applicant. "Then a precious mess you've got me into, that's all," replied the President, and closed the discussion. Very much crestfallen the applicant departed and afterward wrote apologies.

RECKLESSNESS IN HIGH PLACES.

Dr. Adler Explains Why the Sword of Justice is So Blunt.

Dr. Felix Adler, speaking before the Society for Ethical Culture, said that the country's financial troubles were due to the moral recklessness of men in high places. Most of the wickedness of the world, he declared, was not deliberately planned, but the indirect result of the policy of those who did not care for consequences.

"Moral recklessness and obliquity in men in high places have shaken confidence in American securities," he said, "and diminished the value of our assets. The actual wealth of the country is only a part of the assets. The farm products of the United States for the last year were valued at seven and a half billions, but the principle of fair play, of giving an equivalent for good received, is the lien or security on our wealth, and the real asset. Here we have the spectacle of a nation financial causes.

"Robbers at long range, franchise stealers, directors who loan money to one another at one-third less than the market rate, poisoners at long range; these last are gentlemen of good breeding, who wear clean linen, who move in the best society, yet they are poisoners, since they adulterate the food we eat, or worse still, the drugs used by the sick. And so the ugly list swells. Lying advertisers, Jerry builders who have influence with the Building department, counterfeilers, confidence men, and all the wretched brood. The Sword of Justice, why is it so blunt? It strikes, but very rarely cuts. This is one reason why: The distance between the doer and the deed is so great, the difference between the real and the apparent responsibility is so hard to find"—From the New York Evening Post.

Strength of Yate.

Official tests of the many valuable hard woods native to western Australia have made known the extraordinary properties of yate, believed to be the strongest of all known woods. Its average tensile strength is 24,000 pounds to the square inch, equalling that of good cast iron.

Many specimens are, however, much stronger, and one was tested up to seventeen and a half tons to the square inch, which is equal to the tensile strength of wrought iron. The sawn timber of yate is probably the strongest in the world. The tree grows to a maximum height of 109 feet and has sometimes a diameter of two and a half or even three feet.—Westminster Gazette.

"Why do you insist that fancy bathing suits ought to be encouraged?" asked the town official at the seaside resort.

"Because," answered the philanthropist, "they tend to prevent people from going into the water, where they might be drowned."—Washington Star.

Quakers.

A doting parent was telling the Mug-House Club on Saturday night about the precocity of children. "Pardon me," he said, "if I mention one of my own youngsters. He was required to write a composition on Quakers. This is the way he put it: 'Quakers never quarrel, never get into a fight, never claw, never jaw back. My pa is a Quaker, but I really don't know what to call-ma.'—New York Press.

One Way To Break Glass.

It is scarcely credible, but it is a fact, that a glass can be broken by the voice. If you strike a thin wine glass while you hold it by the stem it will emit a certain note—in most cases a pretty deep one. On approaching the glass rapidly to your mouth, and shouting into it the same note is thereby extended. It will be shattered into fragments. This used to be a favorite experiment of Lablaache, the renowned singer, who would thus break, one after the other, as many glasses as were handed to him.

An Odd Bet.

One of the most singular wagers, which might be taken to be the outcome of a growing industrial age, was made and decided in 1811. Sir John Throckmorton at that time bet 1,000 guineas that he could have a coat made in a day, from the first shearing of the sheep to the last stitch of the tailor's needle. According to the agreement, at 5 in the morning Sir John gave two South-down sheep to a Mr. Coxeter. The sheep were shorn, the wool "spun," the yarn "spooled, warped, loomed and woven," the cloth "buried, milled, rowed, dyed, dried, sheared and pressed." At 4 o'clock in the afternoon it was in the hands of a tailor. At exactly 20 minutes past 6 that workman finished his task and the complete coat was presented by Mr. Coxeter to Sir John, who put it on and appeared in it before a crowd of 5,000 applauding spectators.—Metropolitan magazine.

Violence Doesn't Pay.

It is inevitably the case that violence adopted as a means to attain a private end under an organized and just government, results in greater losses than it possibly can in gains. It is for that very reason that violence has been suppressed by organized government. It is an injury, a source of loss, both to those who are its victims and ultimately to those who adopt it.—Chicago Record-Herald.

ECZEMA SEEMED INCURABLE.

Body was Raw—Discharged from Hospitals as Hopeless—Cuticura Remedies Cured Him.

"From the age of three months until fifteen years old, my son Owen's life was made intolerable by eczema in its worst form. In spite of treatments the disease gradually spread until nearly every part of his body was quite raw. He used to tear himself dreadfully in his sleep and the agony he went through is quite beyond words. The regimental doctor pronounced the case hopeless. We had him in hospitals four times and he was pronounced one of the worst cases ever admitted. From each he was discharged as incurable. We kept trying remedy after remedy, but had gotten almost past hoping for a cure. Six months ago we purchased a set of Cuticura Remedies. The result was truly marvelous and to-day he is perfectly cured. Mrs. Lily Hedge, Cambwell Green, England, Jan. 12, 1907."
