ABOLISHED NAVAL PIGEONS

No Longer Needed in These Days of Wireless Telegraphy.

An admiralty official the other day confirmed the statement that the British naval pigeon service was to be allowed to fall into disuse. "Think of it!" he remarked. "Not so very many years ago people were filled with wonderment that a homing pigeon could fly with messages at the rate of sixty miles an hour and reach its destination with safety. Today a wireless message can be sent at the rate of hundreds of miles in a few seconds."

"It was a wise step to establish, as the admiralty did, a carrier pigeon service in connection with the navy; they are equally wise to abandon the stations now that telegraphic facilities have been brought to such a state of perfection.

"Nowadays a battleship can easily keep in wireless communication with Rame Head, near Plymouth, while voyaging to Gibraltar, or even to portions of the Mediterranean. Most of the fleet have the necessary installations aboard.

"The naval pigeon service had its drawbacks, birds often not finding their way home through losing their reckoning or on account of injury. Only in minor ways has their usefulness to the navy been demonstrated. Without wireless telegraphy, however, there is no question that in time of war they would have been a real help."

Among pigeon fanciers there was some consternation, especially on the part of those who belong to what is known as the volunteer carrier pigeon service, which is not, however, to be interfered with. Breeders will no doubt avail themselves of the opportunity to buy the pigeons which have been trained at the admiralty lofts.

EYESIGHT WAS IN DANGER From Terrible Eczema—Baby's Head a Mass of Itching Rash and Sores—Disease Cured by Cuticura.

"Our little girl was two months old when she got a rash on her face and within five days her face and head were all one sore. We used different remedies but it got worse instead of better and we thought she would turn blind and that her ears would fall off. She suffered terribly, and would scratch until the blood came. This went on until she was five months old, then I had her under our family doctor's care, but she continued to grow worse. He said it was eczema. When she was seven months old I started to use the Cuticura Remedies and in two months our baby was a different girl. You could not see a sign of a sore and she was as fat as a new-born baby. She has not had a sign of the eczema since. Mrs. H. F. Burke, LeSueur, Minn., Apr. 13 and May 2, 1907."

The Missing Link. The famous ape man, Pithecanthropus erectus, was found about sixteen years ago by Dr. Eugene Dubois in the gravel beds of the Bengawan river, near Trin, in Japan. The recent explorations in the same locality by Dr. Eiberts, the German geologist, seem to indicate that Java had still earlier inhabitants, who built fires, cooked deer, pigs and ancient buffaloes and elephants, and had pottery and stone arrow heads. These people, whose bones are not reported among the remains found, are supposed to have lived 20,000 years ago.

AGE OF AN EGG.

A fresh egg will sink when placed in water and rest on its side; if three weeks old it will incline slightly with the small end down; if three months old it will stand on the small end, and if older it will float with large end out of water more or less, according to age.

TEMPERATURE OF THE CHURN.

If the temperature of the churn and of the cream is not right, trouble will be experienced in getting the butter to come. About seventy degrees will be best for winter. It will certainly pay to use a thermometer—a dairy thermometer, mind you—so that guessing will not have to be done. The price of the thermometer will often be saved in one churning.—Progressive Farmer.

TESTING COWS.

A Canadian farmer who kept twenty-four cows and two hired men tested his cows with the Babcock test and found that eight were unprofitable. He disposed of them and let one hired man go and at the end of the year found that he had made as much money from the sixteen as he got down to twelve cows and expects to make as much from them as he made from twelve that number. Now he can increase up to his original number as fast as he can find or grow good cows and increase his profits.—Epitomist.

POULTRY SECRETS.

Our birds are kept in a dry, warm place. The great secret is to feed a little less than they will eat and to keep them warm; also to breed from good, strong, healthy, well-bred stock exclusively. At first they should be fed five times daily; when six weeks old the feedings have passed into three times. As they approach this age they get cracked wheat, beef scraps, etc., and then are allowed free range. This ration is not varied until the pullets are old enough to lay, then they get wheat in the morning, mixed grain at noon, and a mash of cornmeal, wheat bran and middlings and ground oats at night. To improve the laying qualities of my flocks I breed from my best layers only.—E. B. Swain, in Farm Stock Journal.

DO THE CULLING NOW.

It is strange how many people dislike to cull out unthrifty animals. They pour feed into them month after month, and then after six months or more of heavy feeding have nothing to show for their grain and care. The time to cull is right now, and don't stop with the unthrifty hogs and sheep. Cull right straight through the cattle yards and the horse barns. A stunted or unthrifty horse will make an expensive work animal, because it has not the endurance to stand a hard day's work. The milch cow that has poor digestion has no place in the dairy barns, eating clover hay worth $12 and $21 worth of bran. The steer that stands at the bunks most of the time but still shows no gain is an expensive animal to have around. In addition to these poor feeders, there are usually animals about a big farm which keep eating but never seem to get anywhere. Cut them all out. Better give them away than feed them five or six months.—L. C. Brown, in Tribune Farmer.

RAISING YOUNG TURKEYS.

Last summer was my first experience in raising turkeys. I had one young hen and as I wanted to keep her laying and to get the first eggs she laid to hatch as early as possible, I put the first eight eggs under a hen, had seven from that hatch. I kept them in a dry, sunny place. They were doing fine until they were about five days old when I found one away from the hen and thought it got chilled. I brought it to the house, wrapped it in a cloth and laid in the oven. After a while I looked at it when I found it literally covered with those large hen lice, then I knew what ailed my turkeys. I raised five out of that hatch. Here is what I did for them, so it may be a benefit to some one in like trouble. I took all the turkeys from the hen, put them in an old pail, put in a tablespoonful of insect powder in the bottom and dusted a little on them, being careful not to get any of it in their eyes, threw a cloth over them and left them fifteen or twenty minutes, looked at them once in a while. Now to rid the hen of these pests before giving them back, I made a wash of soft water, soft soap and one-half cup of kerosene oil, mixing it thoroughly, put it in a vessel large enough to immerse the hen all but the eyes. I now wiped her dry and set her in a box by the kitchen fire until she got dry enough to walk around. Now let her out in the sun and in a short time you can give her back her turkeys and all is well. I lost no more after this. I was wondering afterwards if the powder would not have done as well for the hen as for the turkeys. That I will try this summer.—Mrs. J. H. Steenburg, in The Epitomist.

TREE PRUNING.

Results which may surprise many practical horticulturists have been obtained by scientific experiments on the Woburn Fruit Farm in England. It has been observed that the less a fruit tree is pruned the larger and heavier it becomes, even when allowance is made for wood removed in annual pruning of normal trees. The fruit crops are also increased as the amount of pruning is diminished. The general conclusion is that the less pruning the better, both as regards growth and fruit. This applies, however, only to healthy and established trees. Transplanted, injured and ailing trees are benefited by pruning.

WICHURAIANA ROSES.

Nobody who has seen the Wichuriana varieties of roses grown as a pillar and as rock plants can have failed to be impressed by their superiority for the latter purpose. On a pillar they grow fairly well, and sometimes thrive, but on a rockery they find their ideal and generally flourish amazingly. Of course, the rockery must be a large one, and have a fair amount of good soil. Then the roses may be allowed to grow away at their own sweet will, with practically no attention from pruning knife or manure cart. If a too flat appearance is presented, a tree branch may be driven into the soil at intervals, and some of the strong annual shoots tied loosely to it. In a very short time really good pillars of flowers are formed in this way.—Indianapolis News.

SPLENDID TREE LUPIN.

There is a measure of refined coloring and superb finish in a flowering bush of Lupinus Somerset that the numerous forms of L. arboreus that pass for it entirely lack. The true plant is distinct in every respect, and above all in the rich butter yellow of the giant flower spikes. Seedlings do not come true, but revert to the extent of eighty-five per cent. to typical arboreus, the tree lupin, and the probability is these reverts are accepted as typical Somerset. The true Somerset has fleshy stems, larger leaves and much finer flowers, and when obtained true it is one of the most handsome flowering plants one can grow in a garden. It reaches one yard in height, and its main stems spring direct from the ground level, forming a sheaf of elegant leafage and flowers.—Indianapolis News.

WILL OLD SEEDS GROW?

A correspondent writes: I have just been testing some 1906 crop of corn and I find that it tests only seventy-two per cent.—much too low to make it safe to plant. The trouble with this old corn is that even by testing every ear one is not sure of getting good seed, for one side of the seed may be good and the other side poor. I would never use two-year-old seed, unless as a last resort. I have also been testing lately some Evergreen Sweet Corn, of 1906 crop, and find that only about thirty per cent. will grow. Clover and alfalfa seed lose their germinating power very rapidly after the first year, and when these seeds show a dark brown color they should be tested carefully. But if these old seeds are used, we should bear in mind that they require more moisture to germinate them, than it does fresh seed, and they will need to be sown deeper. These dry, old seeds will require more time to germinate, but they also will stand harder conditions.—Indiana Farmer.

LILIES AND ROSES.

"So surely as our garden has roses it should have lilies," writes Charles M. Skinner in his delightful book on "Little Gardens." "With roses, lilies and vines, it is a garden in sooth. These flowers are apart from most others in form and mode of growth, and they are of surpassing loveliness. In their exquisite purity, their white humility, their exceeding fragrance, which one breathes with a sort of rapture, they stir, not merely admiration, but emotions akin to those we feel in contemplating the qualities of a lily in a member of the human family: emotions of affection, touched with reverence. These are flowers that saints have borne about the earth, and are thought to bloom in heaven. The old masters show the angels wreathed with lilies.

"And they consort charmingly with the rose; that is, their simplicity and silvery whiteness make them a foil to the other flower—passionate, rich colored—and its slender leaves are a contrast to the luxuriant bush. When we have planted a rose, a substantial, free blooming damask, or a hearty old cabbage rose, at the back of a bed, it can have no better company than a lily.

"Though a trifle tall for a border, any or all of the lilies will make a good appearance against a green background, care being taken to avoid such contrasts as cheapen the red and yellow of some varieties when placed near other flowers. The wood lily and tiger lily, for example, are of a tawny or foxy shade that suffers by contact with the crimson of a rose, the pink of a peony, or the scarlet of a geranium. They can better abide near zinnias, marigolds, nasturtiums and coreopsis."—The Home Beautiful.

PERUNA EDITORIAL NO. 2.

Dr. Hartman has claimed for many years that Peruna is an EXCELLENT CATARRH REMEDY. Some of the doctor's critics have disputed the doctor's claim as to the efficacy of Peruna.

Since the ingredients of Peruna are no longer a secret, what do the medical authorities say concerning the remedies of which Peruna is composed? Take, for instance, the ingredient HYDRASTIS CANADENSIS, OR GOLDEN SEAL. The United States Dispensary says of this herbal remedy, that it is largely employed in the treatment of depraved mucous membranes, chronic rhinitis (nasal catarrh), atonic dyspepsia (catarrh of the stomach), chronic intestinal catarrh, catarrhal jaundice (catarrh of the liver), and in diseased mucous membranes of the pelvic organs. It is also recommended for the treatment of various forms of diseases peculiar to women.

Another ingredient of Peruna, CORYDALIS FORMOSA, is classed in the United States Dispensary as a tonic.

CEDRON SEEDS is another ingredient of Peruna, an excellent drug that has been very largely overlooked by the medical profession for the past fifty years. THE SEEDS ARE TO BE FOUND IN VERY FEW DRUG STORES. The United States Dispensary says of the action of cedron that it is used as a bitter tonic and in the treatment of dysentery, and in intermittent diseases as a SUBSTITUTE FOR QUININE.

OIL OF COPAIBA, another ingredient of Peruna, is classed by the United States Dispensary as a mild stimulant and diuretic. It acts on the stomach and intestinal tract. It acts as a stimulant on the genito-urinary membranes.

Useful in chronic cystitis, chronic dysentery and diarrhoea, and some chronic diseases of the liver and kidneys. These opinions as to the ingredients of Peruna are held by all writers on the subject, including Bartholow and Souder.

OF HYDRASTIS, BARTHOLOW SAYS it is applicable to stomatitis (catarrh of the mucous surfaces of the mouth), follicular pharyngitis (catarrh of the pharynx), chronic coryza (catarrh of the head). This writer classes hydrastis as a stomachic tonic, useful in atonic dyspepsia (chronic gastric catarrh), catarrh of the duodenum, catarrh of the gall duct, catarrh of the intestines, catarrh of the kidneys (chronic Bright's disease), catarrh of the bladder, and catarrh of other pelvic organs.

BARTHOLOW REGARDS COPAIBA as an excellent remedy for chronic catarrh of the bladder, chronic bronchitis (catarrh of the bronchial tubes).

BARTHOLOW STATES THAT CUBEB, an ingredient of Peruna, promotes the appetite and digestion, increases the circulation of the blood. Useful in chronic nasal catarrh, follicular pharyngitis (catarrh of the pharynx), increasing the tonicity of the mucous membranes of the throat. It also relieves hoarseness. Useful in atonic dyspepsia (catarrh of the stomach), and in chronic catarrh of the colon and rectum, catarrh of the bladder, prostaticorrhea, and chronic bronchial affections.

MILLSAUGH, MEDICINAL PLANTS, one of the most authoritative works on medicinal herbs in the English language, in commenting upon COLLINSONIA CANADENSIS, says that it acts on the pneumogastric and vaso motor nerves. It increases the secretions of the mucous membranes in general. In the mountains of Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee and Carolina, collinsonia canadensis is considered a panacea for many disorders, including headache, colic, cramp, dropsy and indigestion. DR. SCUDDER regards it highly as a remedy in chronic diseases of the lungs, heart disease and asthma.

These citations ought to be sufficient to show to any candid mind that Peruna is a catarrh remedy. Surely, such herbal remedies, that command the enthusiastic confidence of the highest authorities obtainable, brought together in proper combination, ought to make a catarrh remedy of the highest efficacy.

This is our claim, and we are able to substantiate this claim by ample quotations from the HIGHEST MEDICAL AUTHORITIES IN THE WORLD.
