Reynoldsville Pluck and Reynoldsville Posters in Youngstown, Ohio

Richard A. Warnock, proprietor of the Diamond News Stand at Youngstown. Ohio, is the guest of his sisters, Mrs. M. M. Fisher and Mrs. A. J. Disharte, in this place this week. Until a few years ago Mr. Warnock was a familiar figure on the streets of Reyuoldsville and has many friends who will be glad to learn that since going to Youngstown he has been exceptionally successful and built up an independent business for himself. His career in that city is best told by one of the leading business men of Youngstown, who recently wrote as follows to a Reynoldsville man:

"Mr. Warnock came here five or six years ago and from a piano box sold newspapers in the public square. Our citizens, seeing that Mr. Warnock was progressive and not being inclined to take advantage of his condition by imposing on the public, raised by subscription and erected a news-stand on our public square, in which Mr. Warnock has been doing a large business the past five years. Mr. Warnock has the good will of everybody and everybody in the city knows him. Richard has a snug bank account and does not seek the aid of anyone, being independent by close attention to his business."

This shows well what honesty and pluck can accomplish in spite of almost insurmountable difficulties. Youngstown is going to hold an Old Home Week in June and recently when Mr. Warnock visited the headquarters he was agreeably surprised to notice a lot of posters and other advertising matter for Reynoldsville's Old Home Week in conspicuous places. Later he learned that the secretary of the Reynoldsville Business Men's Association had been co-operating with the secretary of the Youngstown association in getting the celebration planned.

Sunday School Workers.

Pastors and superintendents should hold in mind that the Jefferson County Sunday School Association will hold its annual convention at Reynoldsville June 9th and 10th, and take such steps as will bring their schools in close touch with this movement. The county secretary, Miss Margaret Butler, Reynoldsville, has sent to each school blanks for statistical reports. In case these have not been filled out and sent in, kindly see that it is done at once. If cards have been lost, write Miss Butler for another. Such persons should be sent as delegates that will bring back to the school practical belp from the convention. Superintendents and secretaries should be urged to attend. Pastors are expected to attend. Every school should arrange to bring or send its apportionment of two cents per member for the expenses of the county association. Individual donations are suggested. Please see that this is done promptly and in a business-like way. Watch the papers. More next week. C. R. CRISSMAN.

The Old Faded Shawl

AN ORIGINAL STORY BY MISS CELIA YOST

The following essay was read by Miss Celia Yost at the High School Entertainment on Monday evening, and it is published by request.

The children were all very much been waiting for the 21st of September, wedding anniversary. As grandfather lived on a small farm, a short distance before the wedding and come home the day after. There were yet two days remaining until the appointed time, and already each one of the five children had his or her little gift wrapped up and marked either "To Grandpa" or "To Grandma."

At last the day came and after all were crowded into the carriage, which father had brought for them, they cried, "Hurrah for Grandfather's," and away they went.

The journey was soon ended and arriving at grandfather's they, with many cousins, ate the splendid dinner grandmother had prepared for them. Many cookies, nuts, and such things were slyly slipped into pockets, to be eaten later by those who were too well supplied to eat them at present.

After dinner they were sent to the garret. There they were to find a wedding dress which she had worn so many years-before. The garret had always been a mysterious place to the children, and they decided to see what they could find. Strings of onions and corn hung from the rafters. In the corner stood the spinning wheel: next to it the reel; there boxes and lumber were piled high and everywhere they looked was something that told of bygone days. Suddenly one child cried, "Oh, here is the chest, but it is nailed shut. I wonder what all is in it." Opening it they found it to be filled with old fashioned clothes. Grandmother's dress was there and grandfather's old army coat. "But what is this," cried one girl. "Oh an old silk shawl. How soft and nice, although it is old and faded," cried another. "Let us ask grandma who it belonged to." To this they agreed and soon stood before her begging for a story about the shawl.

Progressive games were played.

It was one cold morning in grandfather's and grandmother's golden February, long ago, when grandpa opened the door and a bundle wrapped in that old shawl rolled in. A faint from the city, they would go the day cry was heard and calling me, we soon unwrapped the bundle and found to our surprise that it contained one of the prettiest babies we had ever seen. I can just see the dear little thing yet, with its golden curly hair and big blue eyes, and as soon as it was warm began to coo and laugh. That was long before we had any children of our own, so grandpa and I, after falling to find the owner of the child, decided to keep it. We always kept it wrapped in the shawl until it was able to walk. One day while the child was toddling about the yard, the shawl was stolen. This seemed very strange to us, because we wondered who would want the old shawl. Soon after this the baby suddenly died.

One evening I found a package in the yard and opening it, discovered it to be the old shawl. A note pinned on it read, "I stole this shawl from the chest in which was grandmother's little child, but it is haunted by the child since it's death. I hear a baby crying continually, and I have no rest. So you may have the shawl again," signed "Its Mother."

Because the shawl reminded me of the lost baby, which I had learned to love so much, I put it away in the chest. One day, long afterwards grandpa went into the garret for something and he imagined he heard a baby cry. The sound seemed to come from the chest; he opened it, but saw only the old shawl. He was frightened and taking a hammer from the shelf on the wall, nailed the top fast, and it has remained thus until to-day. That is the story of the faded shawl, my dears, now run away and play while I help in the preparation for to-morrow, for children it is to be one of the greatest days of my life. If you are good, you shall see grandpa and me married and perhaps you may be the first to kiss the bride.

Organized a Union.

A meeting in the interest of the W. C. T. U. was held in the M. E. church at Rathmel Wednesday evening, April The speaker, Mrs. S. Canfield Wilson, of DuBois, State Organizer, gave a fine address on "Why Enlist?" The subject, a temperance one, was both instructive and to the point. She urged all to unite in an effort to put away this great evil, and told of what ought to be done and had been done in battle between right and wrong. Result of meeting was the organization of a Union with active members, also Y branch. Officers were elected.

WAS A SOLDIER BOY.

Body of James Foley Brought to Reynville and Interred in Buelah Cemetery.

Mention was made in THE STAR last week that James Foley, of DoBols, a former Reynoldsville boy, was found dead on the Pennsylvania railroad tracks at Collier, W. Va., and that we had no particulars as to how he was killed. Just how the accident occurred will never be known, as he seems to have been alone at the time, The supposition is that he was hit by a fast train. Fred Foley went to Collier Tuesday afternoon and arrived here Wednesday evening with the body, which was taken to home of Frank Foley, a brother of deceased. Friday at 10.30 a. m. funeral service was held at the residence, conducted by Rev. J. C. McEntire, and interment was made in Beulah cemetery beside father of deceased, Pat Foley. During the Spanish-American war James Foley enlisted in Company L. 16th Pa. Vol., and members of that company had charge of the funeral.

James Foley was the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. P. Foley. He was born in Reynoldsville January 23, 1878, and was 30 years old last January.

He had been employed as a fireman on the B. & S. railroad at Sagamore, Indiana Co., and as work was slack on that branch he had evidently gone down into West Virginia to look for another job. His mother did not know he had left Sagamore

Funeral Thursday.

The floral tribute was beautiful, consisting of following pieces: Cross from K, of P. Lodge of Rathmel, pillow from father, mother, brother and sisters, wreath from friends in DuBois, carnations from Florence Brennan, carnations Mrs. D. Johnston and Mrs. J. Johnson, bouquet Mr. and Mrs. J. Turngren, bouquet Mr. and Mrs. Bergquist, plants Mrs. D. Johnston. There were a number of other bouquets from friends.
