The Lost Children.

Children lost ! lost ! Harken to the startled cry. Children lost ! lost ! Oh men, the cities are full of them; and they are your children, your own tender little opes: mothers, the bables that lay to smilling innocence upon your bosoms; the dear, braye boys that looked up to you in perfect confidence and warm, impulsive love. Your homes are lonely without them, your hearts are hungry for their love. Oh, you miss them now: the darlings of your years: you want the little hands in your own once more; you want the warm kiss upon your aching brow. But life hurries on and lost! lost! ever rings through the darkened aisles of time. One by one the drunkard's graves yawn wide and somebody's darling is gone. The midnight reyel and gambling den covers its ghastly dead, and the homes are in sackcloth, and sorrow sits a familiar guest by many a hearthstone. Brave, beloved boys, noble men, fair browed maidens and mature woman hood. Oh, how they fall and perish: and the land is full of "Rachels, weeping for their children, who will not be comforted because they are not."-Punxsutawney News.

A Kind Word.

A kind word costs but little, but it may bless all day the one to whom it is spoken. Nay, have not kind words been spoken to you which have lived in your heart through years, and borne fruit of joy and hope? Let us speak kindly to one another. We have burdeps and worries, but let us not, therefore, rasp and irritate those nearest us, those we love, those whom Christ would have us save. Speak kindly in the morning, it lightens the cares of the day, and makes the household and all its affairs move along smoothly. Speak kindly at night, for it may be before dawn some loved one may finish his or her space of life for this world. and it will be too late to ask forgiveness.-Exchange.

Who Was Dreaming ?

Is the millenium dawning? or have the little furry creatures of the forest decided that a person who carries no gun is not to be feared? THE STAR'S reporter had a curlous experience the other evening and is yet uncertain whether he or the squirrels can explain It best:

Walking home in the twilight from Sherwood on a path leading through a grove of young trees and bordered by tall fern and grass, he suddenly heard the fern rustling ahead of him. Stopping at a point where two young saplings spread their branches above his head, he waited a few moments and was soon surrounded by a band of six or eight little brown ground squirrels, evidently out for a lark. Chattering saucily they raced by twos and threes over the fallen logs, through the grass and fern, up the trees to the slenderest branches, and as they bent beneath their weight jumping through the air to a neighboring tree and circling down its trunk to the ground, to be off immediately on a wild scamper with their fellows. It all occurred with a radius of fifteen feet of the reporter, who stood perfectly motionless beneath the trees, and repeated the little creatures jumped on his feet and clambered up his clothes, apparently without fear. Sometimes when crossing the path, they would pause for a moment, sit up and look at him in a questioning way, but evidently reassured by the lack of movement, went off again on the merry
