Vinol

the famous cod liver and iron medicine, without oil. Vinol is much better than cod liver oil and emulsions, because, while it contains all the medicinal value they do, it disagrees with no one. As a body builder and strength creator for old people, delicate children, after sickness, and for stubborn coughs and colds Vinol is unequalled.

"He would, my dear, if you knew how to handle him," answered the lady of the house.

"No; it is a waste of words to try to talk with him," said the pretty caller, with another sigh. "I saw a dream of a bonnet downtown the other day, and the price was just what you say you gave for yours—$25. But when I mentioned the price my husband flew into a rage and declared that $10 was every cent that he would advance me to buy a bonnet with and if I couldn't make that do I would have to do without."

"Exactly," commented the lady of the house dryly. "You can't expect any other treatment when you approach your husband like that. My husband acts just the same way whenever I ask him for money. But this creature called 'man' is very easily handled if you go about it in the right way. Now, when I saw this bonnet downtown I made up my mind that I would be the happy possessor of it, so that night at the dinner table I began going into raptures over a bonnet that I had seen while shopping, the price of which was only $50, and then I added as an afterthought that I had quite made up my mind to buy it."

"What!" roared my husband, "fifty dollars for a bonnet? I guess not! You'll have to put up with $25, and not a cent more do you get!"

"As that was exactly the amount that I wanted I am afraid that the tears I shed were somewhat forced. But I gained my point, and that was what I was after."—Detroit Free Press.

DROWNED PERSONS.

Absence of Water in the Lungs Need Not Indicate Murder.

Several cases have been reported in the newspapers recently in which the absence of water in the lungs of persons found immersed in ponds and rivers has led to the conclusion that death had occurred before immersion and that the crime was therefore murder and not suicide. As the matter is of great criminal importance, permit me to call attention briefly to the report in 1892 of a committee appointed by the Royal Medical and Chirurgical society of London to investigate this question. It was a well known fact that in most drowned persons water was not found in the lungs, and it was supposed by many that in drowning a spasmodic contraction of the entrance of the windpipe took place, which prevented the entrance of water. The committee made a very careful and prolonged investigation and came to conclusions which I summarize as follows:

First.—Water does enter the lungs in drowning. In animals drowned by immersion in water the lungs, if examined immediately afterward, are full of water. If a dog be drowned in plaster of paris the plaster is found in the smallest tubes. In a guinea pig whose nose only has been immersed in mercury the globules of mercury penetrate the finer tubes.

Second.—If the examination be delayed for several hours or longer, as is generally the case, no water may be found in the lungs, absorption having taken place even after death. In experiments upon animals it was found that forty or fifty ounces of water could be introduced into the lungs without any of the liquid being detected there an hour or two afterward. In cases of undoubted drowning in human beings, when the examination was delayed for several hours after death, fragments of water plants and other foreign substances may be found in the windpipe and larger tubes without any water being detected in the tissue of the lungs. Absorption of water takes place in the lungs even after death, and therefore the absence of water in the lungs many hours after death has no bearing upon the question of murder or suicide. It is very important that this fact should be generally known.—A. Brayton Ball in New York Times.

Van Dycks That Were Forgeries.
The trial of art dealers at Genoa for smuggling seven famous Van Dycks from the Cattaneo palace has resulted in an acquittal. It was proved that six of the pictures had never left the palace, the smuggled works of art being forgeries. This recalls the outburst of indignation in Italy some years ago concerning a Raphael which was secretly conveyed to America for a well known millionaire. That it was a genuine Raphael the most skillful experts in the United States had no doubt, and it bore the great artist's unmistakable signature. But, much to Italy's relief, a closer examination of the canvas proved it to be a clever forgery, which was afterward traced to a studio in Rome whose "old masters" were turned out by the dozen.—London Chronicle.

Unique Straw Hat.
The proprietor of a fashionable cafe at Marienbad is the possessor of a straw hat which he values at $1,000. The hat is not a costly variety of Panama, but is rather a rough looking straw hat. Yet it is the pride of the proprietor's life because it is woven of straws through which the crowned heads of Europe have at various times sucked cooling drinks dispensed in the owner's establishment. For many years this king worshiper had been collecting straws from the royal lips, scolding mere nobles or statesmen. When the collection was large enough the hat was manufactured.

A Roundabout Bite.
In San Francisco the campaign against rats as spreaders of the plague is a subject of universal discussion. The topic has reached even the children.

"Wot they hunting up all rats fer?"
"Aw, don't yer know nothing? Rats has the plague, an' if you see one you'd better look out, 'cause you'll get it, too, maybe."
"If you just see a rat, do you get it?"
"Aw, don't you know nothing? You've got the plague when you've been bit by a flea what's been bit by a rat what's been bit by a sailor."—San Francisco Call.

Bridge Built in Forty Minutes.
An unusual feat in pontoon bridge building has been accomplished by a company, a hundred strong, drawn from four cavalry regiments of the Berlin garrison. Arrived at a point where the Spree is very wide, the guardsmen, assisted by a dozen pioneers, constructed in forty minutes a bridge of steel boats and plates 108 feet long and ten feet broad. A squadron of cuirassier guards was the first to try it, riding twice across. Then a loaded baggage wagon weighing fifty hundredweight, drawn by six horses, traversed the bridge repeatedly.

A United South Africa.
England's dream of a united South Africa is coming true. The premiers of Cape Colony, the Transvaal and the Orange River Colony recently moved in their respective legislative assemblies the adoption of the resolution of the intercolonial customs and railway conference calling for an early union under the British crown. Natal is no whit behindhand, and the resolution of the conference specially referred to the inclusion of Rhodesia in the great South African state at a convenient opportunity.
