DR. MURRAY TO BE SPECIALIST.

Will Take a Special Course in Philadelphia and New York on Diseases of Stomach.

Dr. John H. Murray, one of our prominent physicians, who has been practicing in Reynoldsville since 1895—thirteen years—has decided to become a specialist on diseases of the stomach and on Wednesday of next week, Feb. 10, he and his family will go to Philadelphia where Doctor will take a four month course in the American Hospital for stomach diseases, and then go to New York City and take a two month course in the Polyclinic, making in all a six month course. For several years Dr. Murray has been making a special study of stomach diseases and is pretty familiar with that line of work now, and after six months of special preparation in Philadelphia and New York City he should be able to treat stomach diseases successfully, build up a large practice and become a noted specialist in that work. There is no stomach specialist within a radius of fifty miles, or more, of Reynoldsville and there are a host of people in our own community who suffer with stomach disease of some kind, and a doctor who makes a special study of such diseases and devotes his time exclusively to that line of study and practice, should be a very busy man, and we predict that Dr. Murray will find that to be true when he is ready to begin treatment of sick stomachs. We are glad to state that Dr. Murray expects to return to Reynoldsville and reside here, as it will be a credit to our town to have a good specialist located here. THE STAR wishes Dr. Murray success and fame as a specialist in stomach diseases.

GREAT AMERICAN STAR

Viola Allen Coming to the Jefferson Theatre, Punxsutawney, Feb. 12.

Viola Allen, for a time devoted to Shakespearean characterization, but now once more appearing in modern drama, the field in which she became so immensely popular, after her historical triumph in "The Christian," is scheduled to appear at the Jefferson Theatre, Punxsutawney, Friday evening, Feb. 12, in the strongest drama she has ever attempted, called "The White Sisters." This new play of F. Marion Crawford deals with a startling problem, that of an impoverished young girl of noble family, who becomes a nun after having falsely been led to believe that her soldier-lover had been killed in a distant land, and who is afterwards brought face to face with him, after his almost miraculous escape from the fate that befell the rest of his regiment. Mr. Crawford has been able to sustain the element of suspense throughout, and has built up a number of masterly situations. Miss Allen is given a part, such as the emotional actress years for, and one that tests the ability of even so efficient an actress.

Seats on sale at McEntire's drug store, Reynoldsville. Trolley car for Reynoldsville after the play.

A Word of Appreciation.

John S. Ward, private in Company A, 2nd Regiment, son of Ex-Constable P. J. Ward, of Reynoldsville, who has been in the Philippine Islands two and a half years, is returning to the States and in a letter requesting us not to send THE STAR to his address at Cavite, P. I., any more, says: "You can stop sending the paper until I get settled again. You have my thanks for being so prompt in sending me THE STAR every week for over thirty one months that I have been out here. The people at home have been rather slow at times in writing, but I could always rely on THE STAR to get all the news. I hope to get the paper again when I get settled down. I have no idea where we will be stationed in the states."
