Full Sets of False Teeth for Dogs.
News comes from London that many dentists there have established "parlors" for the treatment of dogs, and that the patronage of the owners of "show dogs" has made the innovation a profitable one. A defective tooth may lose the prize to a dog otherwise perfect as to "points," and it is now a common practice with fanciers to send their pets to the dentist as regularly as wise parents send their children. Single new teeth from $4 to $5 each, while as much as $135 is paid for a full set for a beloved old canine member of a household.

ONE KIDNEY GONE,

But Cured After Doctors Said There Was No Hope.

Sylvanus O. Verrill, Milford, Me., says: "Five years ago a bad injury paralyzed me and affected my kidneys. My back hurt me terribly, and the urine was badly disordered. Doctors said my right kidney was practically dead. They said I could never walk again."

I read of Doan's Kidney Pills and began using them. One box made me stronger and freer from pain. I kept on using them, and in three months was able to get out on crutches, and the kidneys were acting better. I improved rapidly, discarded the crutches and to the wonder of my friends was soon completely cured."

Thirty Thousand Quakes a Year.

It was realized about 15 years ago, more or less, that a series of earthquake observatories, with delicate instruments, could obtain records of shocks in any quarter of the globe, and identify the spot with certainty, even if there were no witnesses of the actual occurrence. From the records of these observatories it appears that there are every year some 30,000 minor shocks of earthquake in different localities.—Current Literature.

CURE

POSING A RATTLESNAKE.

"Until one has actually tried to make a rattlesnake strike—for the purpose of getting his picture, for example—it is difficult to realize what a mild creature he is," declares Mr. Dane Coolidge, in a recent narrative of his experience with rattlers. He did not, however, acquire this sense of their mildness immediately, and he admits that their tempers vary; nor was it till after two or three seasons of catching them as a part of his business of wild animal collecting that he began to lose his fear and was seized with a desire to photograph what is, he declares, "undoubtedly the ugliest snake in the world."

Despite this dubious charm, it is scarcely likely that many amateurs of the camera will care first to catch, then to release at the proper place and season, then to coax or to force to pose, and finally to "snap" such difficult models.
"To make the rattlesnake pose," says Mr. Coolidge, "that is the heavy work of the artist. Snakes are very sensitive to the attitude of their masters. There must be no vexatious outbreaks, or the subject will become unmanageable; no nervous fidgetting and dodging, or he will become bold and attempt to escape. But, even as you would humor a spoiled child, he calm, firm and persistent."

He succeeded in obtaining many characteristic pictures, and his further description, if it fails to arouse emulation, will assuredly arouse interest.
"On level ground a four-foot rattlesnake can strike about two and a half feet. To procure a good picture the camera should be within four feet of him."
"With a margin of a foot and a half, it would seem easy for the photographer to control his nerves and get a perfect exposure. But by the time the old bulldog, fighting male has been brought to his characteristic pose—head up, rattles quivering convulsively, and neck retracted like a drawn bow—the human imagination steps in and makes that four feet seem less than two. And from constantly watching his opal-glowing, hateful eyes, the darting red tongue and poison-swollen jaws, a kind of horror, such as is supposed to charm birds, creeps over me. The muscles twitch and joggle the camera, and one's feet develop a surprising tendency to back up instead of to go ahead."

"But that fighting pose is hard to get, and it endures but a moment. As the snake lowers his head, I move quietly forward, watching it through my lens. The moment it is focused I stamp my foot. Instantly the head is raised, the supple neck drawn tense. I spring my shutter and step back unharmed."
FISHING FOR SHARKS.
Aitutaki, one of the Cook Islands, is celebrated for shark catching all over Australasia. One does not catch sharks in Aitutaki after the usual fashion, writes Beatrice Grimshaw in her book, "In the Strange South Seas." There is something more exciting in store for the visitor who goes fishing in Aitutaki lagoon. By noon the lagoon is unbearably warm in all the shallow parts, and the sharks, which inhabit it in large numbers, begin to feel uncomfortable. Some of them head for the coral patches here and there, and lie on the sand in the shelter of the rocks, their bodies thrust as far into the clefts and crannies of the coral as they can manage to get. This is the Aitutakian's opportunity. He is perfectly fearless in the water, and he knows that the shark is, after all, a stupid brute. So he arms himself with a knife, takes a strong rope, noosed in a slip-knot at one end, and dives from his whale boat into the warm, green water, where he has marked the latter end of a shark sticking out from a patch of coral, some three or four fathoms underneath the surface.
The shark, being head in, does not see anything, but by and by he becomes aware of a delicate tickling all along his massive ribs, and as he rather likes this, he stays quite still and enjoys it. It is the Aitutakian, tickling him as boys tickle a trout in a stream, and for exactly the same reason. He has got the noose in his left hand, and his aim is to slip it over the shark's tail, while he distracts the brute's attention by pleasantly tickling with the other hand. He is pretty sure to get the noose on before the shark suspects anything. Once that is accomplished he rises to the surface like a shooting air bubble, swings himself into the boat, and gives the order to haul in. The men in the boat lay hold of the rope, tighten with a sharp jerk, and toils on.
Now the shark begins to realize that something has happened, and realizes it still more fully in another minute or two, when he finds himself fighting for his life on the gunwale of a rocking boat, against half a dozen islanders armed with knives and axes.
The battle is short; the great brute is soon finished, and in another hour or two the village is feasting on his meat, and his fins are drying in the sun, to be sold to the trader by and by for export to China.

No dinner party in China is complete without a dish of daintily dressed shark's fins, and a good portion of the supply comes from the Pacific.

INDIAN TRAINING.

The Indian believes absolutely in nasal breathing. "Again and again," writes Mr. George Wharton James in "What the White Race May Learn From the Indian," "have I seen the Indian mother, as soon as the child was born, watch it to see if it breathed properly. If not, she would at once pinch the child's lips together, and keep them pinched until the breath was taken in and exhaled easily and naturally through the nostrils. If this did not answer, she would take a strip of buckskin, and tie it as a bandage below the chin and over the crown of the head, forcing the jaws together; and then, with another bandage of buckskin, she covered the lips of the little one. Thus the habit of nasal breathing was formed immediately the child saw the light, and it knew no other method.
"But not only do the Indians breathe through the nose; they are also experts in the art of deep breathing. When I first began to visit the Hopis, in Northern Arizona, I was awakened every morning in the 'wee sma' hours,' as I slept in my blankets in the open at the foot of the mesa upon which the towns are located, by cow-bells, as if a number of cows were being driven out to pasture. But in the daytime I could see no cows nor any evidence of their existence. When I asked where they were, my questions brought forth nothing but a wondering stare.
"Cows? They had no cows. What did I mean? Then I explained about the bells, and as I explained, a merry laugh burst upon my ears.
"Cows? Those are not cows. Tomorrow morning, when you hear them, you jump up and watch."
"I did so, and to my amazement I saw, fleeing through the early morning dusk, a score of naked youths, on each one of whom a cow-bell was dangling from a rope or strap round their waist. Later I learned, that every young man was required to run ten, fifteen, twenty miles, or even double this distance, upon certain allotted mornings. This develops a lung capacity that is nothing short of marvelous."

HE DID NOT KNOW.

Illustrative of the exasperating ease with which chickens occasionally "come home to roost," is this story from "A Soldier's Letters to Charming Nellie." One day in June, 1862, in the early part of the Civil War, General Hood, of the Texas Brigade, halted each regiment in turn, and gave his orders. To the Fourth he said:
"Soldiers of the Fourth, I know as little of your destination as you do. If, however, any of you learn or suspect it, keep it a secret. To every one who asks questions, answer, 'I don't know.' We are now under the orders of General Jackson, and I repeat them to you."
General Jackson also gave strict orders against foraging; but apples were plentiful, and it was contrary to nature for hungry soldiers not to eat them, and so it came about that on the march to Staunton General Jackson came upon a Texan sitting on the limb of an apple tree, busily engaged in filling his haversack with the choicest fruit.
The general reined in his old sorrel horse, and in his customary curt tone, asked:
"What are you doing in that tree, sir?"
"I don't know," replied the Texan.
"What command do you belong to?"
"I don't know."
"Is your command ahead of you or behind you?"
"I don't know."
Thus it went on, "I don't know" given as answer to every question. Finally Jackson asked, sternly:
"Why do you give me that answer to every question?"
"Cause them's the order our general gin us this mornin', and he tole us he got 'em that er way straight from ole Jackson," replied the man in the tree.
Disgusted with a too literal obedience to his own commands, but not caring to argue the point, General Jackson rode on.

DESPERATE LEPER TAKEN.

Battling desperately for his continued freedom and trying to make good the threat he has made for years to sell his liberty only with his life, Opuni Aila, a Hawaiian leper, was captured near Honolulu, Hawaii, and is now on his way to the leper settlement on the island of Molokai. The outlaw has for years defied the police of Oahu, has dared them to come and take him from the stronghold he had built for himself among the lava fields of Waianae and has lived by forays on the countryside. At first he was wanted only because he was a leper; then he added to this a series of robberies and hold-ups and a long succession of threats to kill the first man who dared lay hands on him. Twice has he held off police parties at the point of his gun and many times he slipped through the traps laid for him by the territorial police.

Rain and Consumption.

That rainy winds have a marked effect in consumption has been proved by twenty years of observation in Dartmoor and North Devon, England. The death rate from this disease is much less in the sheltered places than in exposed localities.

When your Watch Stops

You cannot make it go by shaking it. When the bowels are constipated you can disturb them with cathartics but, like the watch, they will not be able to do their allotted work until they are put into proper condition to do it.
One cannot mend a delicate piece of mechanism by violent methods, and no machine made by man is as fine as the human body.
The use of pills, salts, castor-oil and strong cathartic medicines is the violent method. The use of the herb tonic laxative, is the method adopted by intelligent people.

Headache, backache, indigestion, constipation, skin diseases—all are benefited immediately by the use of this medicine.

CHILD HAD SIXTY BOILS

And Suffered Annually With a Red Scald-Like Humour on Her Head—Troubles Cured by Cuticura.
"When my little Vivian was about six months old her head broke out in boils. She had about sixty in all and I used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment which cured her entirely. Sometime later a humor broke out behind her ears and spread up on to her head until it was nearly half covered. The humor looked like a scald, very red with a sticky, clear fluid coming from it. This occurred every spring. I always used Cuticura Soap and Ointment which never failed to heal it up. The last time it broke out it became so bad that I was discouraged. But I continued the use of Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent until she was well and has never been troubled in the last two years. Mrs. M. A. The Presidential Armament.

Boston baked beans will form a part of President Roosevelt's outfit when he starts on his hunting trip to Africa this spring, and just to let the jungle folks know further about Boston, he will dismember his big game with Boston-made knives.
Four huge, razor-edged beauties, the very acme of the cutters' craft, have just been finished for the president. The knives were made after designs drawn by United States Civil Service Commissioner McIlhenny of Louisiana. There are two hunting knives, double-edged a portion of their length, and 9½ inches in length of blade, a heavy 10-inch brush knife for cutting through dense undergrowth, and a skinning knife with a blade nine inches in length. Each knife has a silver hand-guard to its heavy ebony handle.—Washington Post.

Plenty of Exercise Necessary.

Plenty of regular exercise must be taken in order to keep the body in a healthy condition. Any excessive or unusual exertion, however, is sure to cause stiffness and soreness of the muscles and joints.
To counteract this effect there is nothing better than Sloan's Liniment. Lay it on lightly where the muscles have been strained; it requires no rubbing for it penetrates right to the bone, relieves any congestion and inflammation and makes the muscles elastic and pliant.
Sloan's Liniment is a great boon to athletes, for it not only relieves pain and stiffness, but it is an excellent remedy for sprains, cuts, bruises and cramps.
Mr. J. F. Price of Tusculuma, Ala., writes:—"I am an engineer on the Southern Road from Chattanooga to Memphis, Tenn. The continued elevation of my arm upon the throttle gives it a sore feeling when on a long journey, and there is nothing that will take the soreness out like Sloan's Liniment, and I keep a bottle in my grip always."

Breaking It Gently.

"Mamma, what would you do if that big vase in the parlor should get broke?" said Tommy. "I should spank whoever did it," said Mrs. Banks, gazing severely at her little son. "Well, then, you'd better begin to get up your muscles," said Tommy, gleefully, "coz papa's broke it."—Harper's Bazar.

Safety in Homicide.

It actually seems safer now in this country to kill a man than to wreck a bank. In the case of the former crime, it appears, an acquittal may always be depended on, if the reputation of feminine relatives is blackened with the theoretical purpose of showing the jurymen the mental condition of the murderer.—Detroit Free Press.

College Men in Business.

Mr. Harriman's opinion as to the condition under which a college man will get on in railroading is very much the same as that of most successful men regarding college men in their especial callings. The great railroad administrator and organizer inevitably lays great stress on the moral rather than the intellectual qualities of the man under discussion. It is "the stick-to-it spirit" that carries one through. But also it is to be remembered that it is this spirit that carries a boy through college with the best results. The one who is endowed with it is not necessarily or generally a fair representative of college training, for that training does a lot more for him than it does for his chum who may lack in perseverance.
The truth is that there is such a variety of boys at college and such a variety in the colleges that any generalization is defective. One thing, however, is indicated in Mr. Harriman's shrewd commentary. It is that the boy in college who has to work and work hard in order to get on has, in the very limitations of his career, a real and valuable advantage over those in "easier" circumstances. Whether he be poor, or only a little dull, if he is forced to put his whole strength into his efforts, they gradually and almost unconsciously build up in him a capacity for work that is more precious than any other quality in after life.—New York Times.

Defining "Optometrist."

An optometry bill will be presented in the Pennsylvania legislature this winter. It will be designed for the protection of the public no less than for the safeguarding of the profession of optometry. This bill will be similar to one passed by the legislature of New York state and signed by Gov. Charles E. Hughes. It will bring into prominence a word that is becoming generally used throughout the United States. Soon everybody will be using "optometrist." What is that? It is the name adopted by the American Association of Opticians at its convention at Milwaukee, Wis., to designate those skilled in the practice of optometry and optometry is the employment of any means other than the use of drugs for the measurement of the powers of vision and the adaptation of lenses for the aid thereof. Governor Hughes, when signing the New York Optometry bill, said: "The practice of optometry exists and will continue to exist, and unquestionably it forms a proper subject for regulation; I, therefore, approve the bill."

Catarah Cannot Be Cured

With LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarah is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarah Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surface. Hall's Catarah Cure is not a quick medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years, and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing catarah. Send for testimonials, free.

Predicting Earthquakes.

Thomas A. Jagger, a professor in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, suggests in a magazine article that the nations of the world unite in the study of earthquakes and volcanic actions in order to gain the scientific knowledge necessary to forecast the recurrence of these natural disturbances, to determine where the danger zones lie and to warn the inhabitants of an endangered locality when to prepare for the worst. Something on this line has been done in the past, but very little. Certain scientists now claim to have foretold the recent earthquake that laid low Messina and Reggio, but if their prophecies were made public they were practically ignored.

Where Prophecy Failed.

When John F. Wallace reduced the cost of excavation at Panama to 50 cents a cubic yard, rival engineers said that he was just digging out the easy spots in order to make a record, and that it was physically, logically and morally impossible to maintain any such rate throughout the whole work. Yet now our engineers are excavating more than 100,000 cubic yards a day at a cost of only 48 cents. Which is another demonstration of the profound philosophical fact that some things can be done as well as some other things.—New York Tribune.

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Louisville, Ky.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has certainly done me a world of good and I cannot praise it enough. I suffered from irregularities, dizziness, nervousness, and a severe female trouble. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored me to perfect health and kept me from the operating table. I will never be without this medicine in the house."—Mrs. SAM'L LEE, 3523 Fourth St., Louisville, Ky.

Another Operation Avoided.

Adrian, Ga.—"I suffered untold misery from female troubles, and my doctor said an operation was my only chance, and I dreaded it almost as much as death. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured me without an operation."—LENA V. HENRY, R. F. D. 3.

Thirty years of unparalleled success confirms the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to cure female diseases. The great volume of unsolicited testimony constantly pouring in proves conclusively that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a remarkable remedy for those distressing feminine ills from which so many women suffer.

The Ingenuity of Inventors.

The ingenuity of inventors and manufacturers is ever at work in the endeavor to reduce the expense of production, and at the same time to improve the quality of articles having a large sale. This is not only beneficial to the purchasing public, but it inures to the benefit of the producer in increasing sales and preventing competition. This has been so in the case of farm machinery, clothing, shoes, bicycles, etc., and now it is apparent in the safety razor field. Thousands of this style of razor have been sold at from $1.50 to $5 each and given satisfaction. Recently manufacturers have applied more scientific principles and improved methods in their manufacture, and the result is seen in the "Shrp Shavr" razor, which is sent postpaid for twenty-five cents in stamps by the Book Publishing House, 134 Leonard street, New York. It is superior to any razor sold, being bought largely by those already owning the highest priced razors. Not every one knows that the best results are obtained by having two or three razors and alternating them in use. This practice of alternating possibly accounts for the very large sale of this low priced implement.

After 20 years of experimenting as Edinburgh firm has brought out an essence of tea which is said to preserve the qualities of the prepared leaf.
