Are We Puritans?

The substance of the opinion of Guglielme Ferrero, the Italian historian, on the American people of to-day, seems to be that while there is much corruption in certain phases of American life, and some jealousy of gradually forming classes, the basis of popular agitation at this time is the fundamental Puritanism of the people. This would seem to be a sound estimate, so far as it goes, for the Italian writer seems to make the necessary distinction between the American people as a whole, and their representation in political life and the financial world.—Kansas City Star.

MR. GOSLINGTON GETTING ON.

Can Wear New Clothes Without Being Stared at in the Street.

"Well, now," said Mr. Goslington, 'this is encouraging; I have sported out in a new suit of clothes without having anybody stare at me, a great advance on anything I've done yet. In such circumstances I used to be so self-conscious that in my efforts to appear natural I made myself all the more conspicuous, so that everybody stared at me, to my further great embarrassment and confusion, but this time I seem to have got through very nicely; nobody noticed me at all.

"I don't know why it is, but we all seem when we put on new clothes to imagine ourselves the centre of all observation, and so despite the pride we may have in them wearing them the first time may be a great trial. I knew a man once who used to break in his new clothes gradually.

"This friend of mine when he got a new suit would first wear the trousers with an old waistcoat and coat. The next day he would wear the new waistcoat with old trousers and coat, and then he'd wear the new coat, with old waistcoat and trousers. In this way he sort of accustomed himself to his new things gradually, so that he didn't feel so strange in them, and then on the fourth day he'd swell out in the new suit complete.

"He thought this helped him a heap, and I dare say it did help him some; but it never appealed to me and it looked like running away, anyhow; and so when I've got a new suit I have just put it on and worn it. I have been self-conscious in it and 1 know it, so that I walked differently and acted differently in some way so that I attracted attention; but I have braved it out, and now I realize that I must have been improving.

'Yesterday I wore for the first time a new suit and absolutely nobody looked at me, and that is encouraging. I don't know but that I would have felt a little better if one or two, just one or awo, had looked at it, but I am mightily pleased to have had nobody look at it. Really, it makes me feel that I am getting on. A man has really got to be somebody when he can wear new clothes without having people stare at him in the street."-New York Sun.

Tipplers from Temperance Towns.

Police Commissioner O'Meara, of Boston, has made the discovery that a large proportion of the persons arrested for drunkenness in that city are visitors from neighboring "temperance" towns, where the raw material for a jamboree can not be obtained. These towns send out statistics showing how "no license" has wiped out the consumption of whiskey, when in fact it has but transferred it to the city, where it is not quite so conspicuous, but considerably worse. The man who makes a trip to the city for refreshments will usually take on a load in a day that would suffice for a month at home, and bring up in the police court. This makes a showing of criminal business in the city for which the coun try is responsible.—Utica, N. Y.

Peel twelve medium sized potatoes, scoop out in little round balls by means of a vegetable cutter or scoop blanch in boiling salted water, and drain. Great care must be taken in blanching. They should be brought to the boil quickly, else they will be in pieces by the time they are cooked. Put two heaping tablespoonfulls of butter in a saute pan. When hot place in the potatoes, toss them over the fire for a few minutes, then put them in the oven, and bake for ten minutes. When finished they should be crisp and of a nice golden color. Drain on paper, sprinkle with a little chopped parsley and serve hot.-New York Press.

Banana Cake.

Two eggs, 1 cupful of sugar, 1-4 cupful of butter, 2 1-4 cupfuls of flour, 1 cupful of milk, 2 level teaspoonfuls of baking powder and a pinch of salt. Beat the sugar and eggs together until thick, sift together flour, salt and baking powder and add them with the milk. Melt the butter without beating more than is necessary and stir it into the cake batter. Bake in layer pans. When cold cover one layer with sliced bananas and over these a layer of frosting made by beating together the whites of 2 eggs with 1 1-2 cupfuls of confectioners' or powdered sugar until smooth. Reserve 1-2 of the frosting and use it to cover top layer of the cage.—Boston Post.

The First Cylinder Press.

In 1814 Frederick Koenig invented the cylinder press in London. It was used here first in 1827. Koenig invented it to the order of Walker of the London Times, the world's great newspaper in those days. The introduction of the cylinder press caused a great commotion. Riots resulted. Its manufacture was carried on secretly. One night the pressmen of the London Times waited in vain for the forms to come down. They thought that news of tremendous importance must have delayed the paper.

Suddenly Mr. Walker appeared and distributed among them the first sheets printed on a cylinder press. It could produce 2,000 impressions an hour.-New York Sun.
