Lost: A Barrel of Sermons.

A Minnesota clergyman has brought a suit against a railroad company which contains one feature of decided interest to laymen as well as to his brethren of the cloth. He seeks damages for the loss of a barrel full of sermons in transit. The plaintiff recently received a call to a church in another part of the country which, although no larger salary was offered, he was induced to accept for two reasons: first, he had filled one pulp for 20 years and he feared his people might be getting tired of him; second, he had preserved all his old sermons and would be able to read them to his new congregation, thereby saving much intellectual exertion. So he agreed to go to the other field of labor, packed up his goods, including the precious barrel of sermons, and departed. When his freight arrived at his new home, the sermons were missing. While no amount of money will wholly compensate him for his loss, he believes the railroad should be made to pay for its carelessness.

England and Mohammedanism.
The only power which has been able to preserve law and order in Mohammedan countries is England, whose king is sovereign over more followers of the prophet than even the sultan of Turkey. Egypt and India and the Sudan are examples of what can be accomplished by overwhelming force. Germany would doubtless be glad of the chance to show what it could do in Asia Minor and Armenia and Syria; but still more hopeful, because more nearly possible, is the expectation of an improvement to come about as the result of strong representations to be made to the new semi-constitutional government of Turkey.—Brooklyn Standard Union.

Strength of Bone.
The effect of food on the strength of bone in hogs has lately been demonstrated by experiments at the Nebraska station, and it was shown that there is a very marked increase in the strength of bone when tankage or ground bone is fed to pigs in addition to corn. In determining the strength of bones, the two principal bones in each leg of each animal were removed and broken in a machine. There were four pigs fed in each lot, making the figures given the average of the breaking of thirty-two bones in each lot. The average breaking strength per 100 pounds, live weight of hogs after twenty-two weeks' feeding was as follows: Lot 1, corn, 325 pounds; lot 2, corn and shorts, 396 pounds; lot 3, corn and skim milk, 590 pounds; lot 4, corn and tankage, 589 pounds; lot 5, corn and ground bone, 681 pounds.—Weekly Witness.

Work the Bull.
Exercise the bull must have, for unless he is properly exercised he will not be thrifty and have a vigorous constitution. This question is a serious one, and the picture of Sir Jacob Poesh at work shows how a bull may be made to exercise and also be of great assistance to his owner. He pumps all the water for a large dairy, cuts feed and makes himself very useful to his owner.

His calves all come strong and thrifty since he began work, and, although he weighs a plump ton, he handles himself like a kitten.

Exercise the Bull.
In size the Ancona averages one-half pound lighter than the average weights given for Leghorns.

The Ancona youngster is an interesting little fellow, with breasts and body coloring intermixed with shades of white and canary, while the top of the head is very dark, often black, from which a dark stripe starts and extends down its neck and terminates in a distinct black stripe running the length of the back. The tip of the wings inclined to show some color also. Shanks, yellow predominates, but may be splashed with a darker color. They breed very true, the chicks all coming very nearly alike.—Ohio Poultry Farmer.

Turkeys For Egg Production.
That it is possible to develop a breed of turkey hens that will lay eggs from spring until Christmas is the contention of W. N. Irwin, of the United States Department of Agriculture. He says that the only reason this feature of the poultry industry has not been developed is that farmers have paid no attention to it. "I have been eating turkey eggs and turkey for many years," says Mr. Irwin, "and have found them better than any other article of food. The thing that started me looking into the possibilities of the turkey was this liking for the eggs. For several years I have been haunting the Central Market of Washington three times a week and buying up turkey eggs. Most of the farmers who bring them into town to sell for food save the eggs for me. I have bought as many as 145 dozen in a year. In the spring, of course, I can not get the eggs, since they are too valuable to sell for food. So I have found that the eggs can be kept very easily all winter. Experience has shown me that turkey eggs kept for that length of time by ordinary means will poach nicely. An egg that poaches is a good egg. I do not put the eggs in cold storage, but keep them cool and dry.

"I believe turkey eggs are as much superior to ordinary hen's eggs as is turkey meat to that of chickens. It took 200 years to get white Leghorns to lay 200 eggs a year, and not many of them come up to that standard even now. I do not believe it will take anywhere near that long to develop 200-egg turkeys, for there have been many changes and advances since experiments were begun with Leghorns. Besides, I have found at least one man near Washington who has a 200-egg turkey, and dozens who say they have birds that lay upward of 100 eggs. Even a 100-egg bird would be a distinct advantage.

"The time has passed when the farmer can afford to raise turkeys for one setting of eggs. The man who told me he had a 200-egg turkey hen killed his bird for the market. I told him he killed at least $100, and he, of course, did not realize it at the time. One gentleman told me the other day that he has two turkey hens that have laid upward of 100 eggs this year and are still at it. He can not get them to stop long enough to fatten them for Thanksgiving. I told him not to think of fattening them, for they are worth vastly more to him for breeding purposes.

"At the least calculation a 200-egg bird should bring $25. If a farmer raises 100 such birds in a year his gross income from them would be $2500. Such a breed of turkeys can be developed only by patient, careful selection from year to year.

"This industry must be undertaken with reasonable conservatism. I believe the results are certain, but persons who go into the work must expect to wait patiently for the promised results. If a farmer had from fifty to 100 birds that laid upward of 100 eggs a year he would have no trouble in getting his price for them. It would not be necessary to wait until the birds get up to the 200-egg class to make big money out of them for their laying qualities.

"The Rhode Island experiment station has become interested in the work. First they started with eggs from birds that laid upward of 100, but for some reason the experiment failed. Now they are working with some young birds. I would advise any farmer who thinks of going into the work to start with young birds from late broods."

Crude Oil For Mange and Lice.
Some experiments have been conducted under the direction of the Bureau of Animal Industry with a view to ascertaining the value of crude oil for removing mange and lice from cattle. Dipping was found very effective, but some loss of animals followed, which was partly accounted for by the late season at which they were dipped. The experiment was conducted in Colorado, and toward the approach of winter. It was found that the insects were not only effectively removed, but that the animals carried the disinfectant with them, and thus they were protected for some time from any danger of reinfection. In some instances where the skin was scabby, the larger proportion of the hair came off, but soon began to grow again.

By this remedy it is reasonable to hope that this exceedingly troublesome disease could be removed from the Western ranges. It is one of the most disagreeable and costly diseases that the prairie farmer must contend with. The treatment of the dipped animals, however, is sometimes a little over harsh. It may be that it will be found practicable to so dilute the preparation that it can be used for dipping without any danger and still prove just as effective. It is safe to assume, however, that crude oil could be used with great advantage by applying it to animals in the farmers' yards when these are affected. If applied with a brush or sprayer, just enough could be put on to effect the desired results without using so much as to cause the hair to fall out. This would, of course, take some experience to learn how to apply it, but the fact that it seems to prove an effective remedy should commend it to the attention of our farmers in the East and South, or any others whose stock are afflicted with either mange or lice.—Weekly Witness.

Anconas.
The Anconas were first brought to public notice in the United States in 1886 by the late Francis A. Mortimer. They were often termed a mottled Minorca. With many that idea still prevails, but they are not, nor have they any approach to the Minorca in size, nor color of shanks, skin, etc.

The Ancona belongs to the Leghorn family, and would have been rightly named "The Mottled Leghorn."

The only resemblance the Ancona can produce that would approach the Minorca is the size of their eggs and

WILL BUILD AIRSHIPS

Organized to Operate Patents of Dr. Boyd, Native Inventor.
London.—The "Daily News" quotes Dr. Boyd, who is the inventor and builder of the new English airship, which has been making flights at night, as saying that a millionaire director of one of the principal railroad companies and other very wealthy men are interesting themselves in forming a private company with a capital of a quarter of a million pounds sterling ($1,250,000), to operate the patents which are being taken out in connection with his airship.
Dr. Boyd hopes to begin daylight trials of the machine about a month hence. He refuses as yet to reveal the whereabouts of the ship.
The other London newspapers, with one minor exception, ignore the accounts of the airship so far.

"MEMOIRS OF DAN RICE," THE CLOWN OF OUR DADDIES.

At Last, There is on Sale a Book Brimful of American Humor.
Any bookseller will tell you that the constant quest of his customers is for "a book which will make me laugh." The bookman is compelled to reply that the race of American humorists has run out and comic literature is scarcer than funny plays. A wide sale is therefore predicted for the "Memoirs of Dan Rice," the Clown of Our Daddies, written by Maria Ward Brown, a book guaranteed to make you roar with laughter. The author presents to the public a volume of the great jester's most pungent jokes, comic harangues, caustic hits upon men and manners, lectures, anecdotes, sketches of adventure, original songs and poetical effusions; wise and witty, serious, satirical, and sentimental sayings of the sawdust arena of other days. These "Memoirs" also contain a series of adventures and incidents alternating from grave to gay; descriptive scenes and thrilling events; the record of half a century of a remarkable life, in the course of which the subject was brought into contact with most of the national celebrities of the day. The book abounds in anecdotes, humorous and otherwise; and it affords a clearer view of the inside mysteries of show life than any account heretofore published. Old Dan Rice, as the proprietor of the famous "One Horse Show," was more of a national character than Artemus Ward, and this volume contains the humor which made the nation laugh even while the great Civil War raged. This fascinating book of 500 pages, beautifully illustrated, will be sent postpaid to you for $1.50. Address Book Publishing House, 134 Leonard street, New York City.

AFTER FOUR YEARS OF MISERY

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound
Baltimore, Md.—"For four years my life was a misery to me. I suffered from irregularities, terrible dragging sensations, extreme nervousness, and that all gone feeling in my stomach. I had given up hope of ever being well when I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Then I felt as though new life had been given me, and I am recommending it to all my friends."—Mrs. W. S. Ford, 1888 Lansdowne St., Baltimore, Md.

The most successful remedy in this country for the cure of all forms of female complaints is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has stood the test of years and today is more widely and successfully used than any other female remedy. It has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, and nervous prostration, after all other means had failed.

If you are suffering from any of these ailments, don't give up hope until you have given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you would like special advice write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for it. She has guided thousands to health, free of charge.
