

Woman in Trinity Faculty. Constantina Elizabeth Maxwell is the first woman to become a member of the teaching staff of Trinity College, Dublin, one of the most venerable and conservative institutions of learning in Europe. She has been elected assistant to the professor of modern history. She was graduated only a few months ago with a first senior moderatorship. She won a gold medal in history and political scionce, easily taking first place in a class of more than forty and in which she was the only woman .- New York Press.

Blow to Suffrage Cause.

Marie Corelli's recent announce ment of her opposition to woman suffrage is the first public statement that has come from her in several years. and it may mark a determination to foresake the life of retirement which she has led for so long in her cottage in Shakespeare's birthplace. Until recently she seldom walked out in Stratford, and she was opposed to all visitors wandering near her home. Now, however, she goes out daily; she has taken to entertaining, and she goes up to London for a whirl in society. The two leading women novelists in England now have expressed opposition to equal suffrage. Mrs. Humphry Ward, in fact, being at the head of the Anti-Suffrage League, which is working with a similar organization in this country. Mrs. Ward and Miss Corelli wield much influence in England, and their open hostility means a hard blow to the suffrage cause .-New York Press.

Right Way to Chaperon.

If it falls to your lot to chaperon young folk, try not to feel it is a fa tiguing task, but recall how indefatitable you were when you were young, and with such a remembrance uppermost you may be able to let boys and girls enjoy themselves. It really requires much strength and endurance to be an ideal chaperon, for youth is tireless in the pursuit of pleasure, and to keep up with this in a moderade and reasonable degree requires patience, sympathy, and tact, for young folk need careful handling, which they doubly repay by obedience and by responsiveness to the ideas of their elders. Though it is, of course, your duty when chaperoning to keep boys and girls within the confines of conventionality, try not to be constantly correcting and curbing them. It is said that the word "don't" is never used in Japanese families, and sometimes it would seem as if we use it too much.-Boston Herald.

Raps Defacing of Nature.

Mrs. Annie Besant has been scold ing the West for its defacement of its natural grandeur for the sake of commercial gain, and oddly enough views were applauded enthusiastically in Butte. "The wonders and beauties of nature which in this country could be trusted to the red men cannot be trusted to the whites," said Mrs. Besant to her Butte audience. "The indifference of the people ac counts for it. The beauties of a great waterfall will be destroyed to furnish power for a manufacturing plant, the vegetation of a whole community will be killed by the smoke from the chimneys of a plant of one company, the rocks in the heart of the Rock Moun tains defaced by the names of a few tradespeople-often because those who could interfere don't care." Mrs. Besant caused surprise in Butte, for it is told the audience gathered in a spirit of derision, expecting to be bored with dense theory, but was quickly won over by "a sane talk, giving simple facts with sensible views."-New York Press.

try, the more showy and expensive the apparel, the higher up the person goes in our estimation. While all this indicates exceeding narrowmindedness and poverty of judgment, it has been the way with us little human beings from time immemorial and not without its quota of reason, for there's a method in our madness Was not the chief of the savage tribe known from others by his more gorgeous habiliments, and does not the queen of one of the most civilized countries on the globe today wear the ermine robe and jeweled crown to show her rank?

There is no doubt about the fact that dress has always been a potent factor in the problem of success. writer in Harper's Bazar tells this story: A wealthy physician was giv-ing sound advice to a young man who was to follow his profession. "Never," he said, "if you are starving, allow yourself to look poor. Dress well if your stomach goes empty, and never let your patients suspect that you need the money they owe you. Insist that they pay you promptly, and say that it is one of your principles to have no outstanding bills, but make them think you are prosperous. Remember my boy, dress well, act rich, if you would be rich."

But there is something more than pitiful in woman's devotion to dressto see how we lay down our comfort even our health, as sacfifices on the altar of fashion. And just now that perverse goddess has reached her extremest limit. There is such a thing as the "eternal fitness of things," but dame fashion seems not to know anything about it, and some of the "beautiful creations" are sorry failures when it comes to harmonious effect. And so many frivolous bangles, beads and tawdry things are worn by the woman of fashion today that she looks much like a human Christmas tree.

But fashion is a despot and we can not fly in her face any more than in the face of Providence. The basis of society is conformity to custom, and it is in the worst possible taste to assume absolute independence in dress. The woman who disregards fashion and makes herself an isolated case will soon find her popularity waning. Only the unusually gifted or talented may be eccentric in dress-as the great Count Tolstoy, who goes about attired in a loose robe of sackclath held in place by a hempen rope; or the elderly and extremely wealthy, like Mrs. Hetty Green, who is said to wear a faded and worn alpaca dress, with shabby shawl and bonnet of the style of twenty-five years ago.

But we ordinary mortals must conform to custom, though one does' not have to be an extremist to the dictates of fashion. In dress as in everything else there is the happy medium One may dress within the limits of fashion and yet not be extreme. The well-bred woman, no matter how many dollars she may have, is never over dressed though she may be well dressed .-- Virginia Cobbe, in the Indiana Farmer.

Scented Pillows.

Take your choice of pine or lavender. You will need one of your own to slip into your trunk for the trip or to use on the porch, hammock or couch.

When made for the bed they are incased in strong muslin covers. Over this is drawn a pretty little white slip of the sort used to cover baby pillows. For couches and out of doors more serviceable materials are used. For pine pillows a cover of natural colored linen, embroidered perhaps in wood brown, is pretty. Grass green linen is also suitable for the purpose and cool looking. The lavender pillow should be incased in lavender, embroidered in a lighter shade or one of the pretty white cretonnes, covered with sprigs of lavender. The pillows are not only pleasant to have, but they frequently are an actual aid in producing refreshing sleep, since certain odors are known to have a soothing effect.-Boston Post.

Rosa Bonheur Made Foes.

Ross Bonheur had one habit which was the means of making her many enemies. In the face of every person she met she traced a likeness to some animal, and was tactless enough to speak of the discoveries she made. A French duchess who had bought two of her animal pictures was described by Bonheur once as the "camel-faced woman," and that ended their friendship for all time. An English countess went to France especially to see the famous animal painter, and the two women were attracted to each other and exchanged letters for several years. The correspondence ended abruptly, however, when the countess was informed that Bonheur spoke of her as "that Englishwoman with the cow face." here were many other incidents of a similar nature in Bonheur's experience which led her to the belief that men have a keener sense of the ridiculous and the humorous than women. Men whom she had likened to animals low in scale were amused when they heard of it, and that pleased Bonheur. She lost a friend in one French nobleman, however, whom she described as "the man with the pig face."-New York Press.

The Philosophy of Dress.

"The tailor makes the man." It was Carlisle, or somebody else, who said this, and it was a long time ago. But the truism is just as obvious today. We are prone to judge persons, men and women, by their clothes and as money has come to be the great ruling power in our coun-

Lace coats are noticeable for taffeta silk trimming, heavily soutached in the same color as the lace.

The half-around-the-head barrette is a favorite decoration for young girls. It is usually twined with colored rib bons.

A novelty in belts in a handsome tailored leather one, with chatelains of the leather, from which swings an envelope of the same kind.

The latest lingerie touch is to have cherry ribbon bows fasten up the dainty garments, instead of the oldfashioned baby blue and pale pink.

Fashion authorities declare that this season the separate waist must match in some feature the dress of which it temporarily forms a part.

Some of the newest tailormades are severe in style, but they lace the old masculine hardness, which made the styles of a decade ago so memorable.

The use of colored shoes has grown universal, especially for house and evening wear, and there are new soft suedes, in grays, fawns, browns and white.

Wrist bands, which are a revival of the early Victorian beaded bracelet, have been introduced, and there is a threat of guite a revival of these trifles.

The costume is now considered in complete without a wrap of some sort, no matter how slight it may be, and this has caused a renewed vogue for the scarf.

Spanish and Russian mantles are de cidedly artistic, but they must be worn by a woman of height and slender build-one who can carry her gown gracefully.

One of the new skirts is known as the gored corselet skirt. The gores are quite narrow at the top and form a low corselet with one point at the front, usually made with the front panel, and two at the back.

Hair Dressing.

All colffures are low, very much built-out at the back, and rolled softly at the sides. Tiaras, wreaths and barrettes are the usual hair ornaments, also metal gauze wreaths in the form of laurel leaves.

Rose Behind the Ear.

The pretty fashion of wearing a single rose behind the ear has been revived, and when beneath the flower a couple of curls fall upon the shoulder, a very strong reminiscence of the crochet. These reticules may be fashions of the 50's of last century is aroused.

Military Effects.

The Russian Cossack and the military effects bid fair to have a strong vogue in millinery.
