Lo, the Poor Sparrow! His Doom is Sealed.

DuBois Man Discovers Way To Exterminate the Little Nuisances.

According to a DoBois paper H. W Smith, of Clearfield, has discovered a successful method of combating the English sparrow nulsance in the garden, and after having the new remedy working one week has ninety-one little feathered marauders hanging up to his back yard. Smith is quite an expert the bane of his life for the last two or three years, they seemingly holding all their celebrations or gatherings in his garden. He tried poison and every known remedy or cure, even soliciting and securing aid and; advice from Dr. Surface, of the State Agricultural Department. After trying the poison suggested by Dr. Surface as a last resort, and with practically no effect, he was about to give up the battle in disgust, and was sitting on his back porch watching a band of sparrows making havoc of a prize lettuce bed, when he stumbled on what has since proved to be the salvation of his garden. While the sparrows were getting their fill of lettuce a gust of wind blew a chicken feather across the garden, and in an instant every sparrow in the crowd it had a jolly time pulling it to pieces. Like a drowning man grasping at a straw, Mr. Smith hustled into the house, and securing a small wire mouse trap, placed a feather thereon and set it near the lettuce bed. He had hardly got back to the porch when a sparrow made a dash for the feather and was an easy victim. The trap was set again, and in a few minutes another little villain met his death, and Mr. Smith made a bee line for a hardware store, where he invested in a dozen mouse traps, which he has set about his garden and is rapidly depopulating the sparrow tribe here-abouts.

Hon, S. B. Elhott to Speak.

Prof. J. A. Ferguson, of State College, accompanied with twenty-eight students preparing for the National Forestry service, are in summer camp on the Ciarlon river, near Foxburg. It has been the practice of the college to establish a camp each year for the graduating class for the purpose of according practical lessons in actual work in the woods. Hon. Robert S. Conk'in and I. C. Williams, of Harrisburg, and Hon. S. B. Elliott, of Reynoldsville, of the Pennsylvania State Forestry Commission, are expected to visit this camp, and on Saturday evening, June 25, in the New Lincoln Hall, Foxburg, there will be a public Forestry meeting held, to which all in the surrounding country are cordially invited. No admission charge. The questions of forests, wood lets and what we are going to do for timber in the future is of vital importance. The cost of planting and maintaining trees, the benefits accruing financially and otherwise will be expertly discussed.

Why not have this kind of a celebra that persons under 18 years of age and inexperienced teachers from other tion? It takes little preparation and could be easily arranged-Big Run Tribune,

What's the use? Better jump on the trolly and come to Reynoldsville and have the time of your life. Reynoldsville has the only big celebration in five counties.

Clarion Commencement Exercises.

The arrangements for the annual commencement at the Ciarion State Normal School have been completed. This commencement season promises to be one of the most interesting occasions the school has ever had. Bishop Ethelbert Talbot of the Bethlehem Diocese, Central Pennsylvania, will preach the baccalaureate sermon and Edwin Earl Sparks, president of State College, will be the commencement orator. The Campus Pageant, Class Reunions, Literary Contest, Music, Graduates' Recital and the Class Day Exercises will be among the interesting events of the week.

Old Friends Meet. Rev. Dr. McKinley, now of Reynoldsville, and the editor of the Tribune first met in Iowa some 28 years ago where they were members of Council Bluffs Presbytery and pastor in two of its churches. They had not met for about eight years until at the C. E. convention this week. It certainly gave us great pleasure to see and talk with our old co-presbyter and to hear him preach. He has a prominent church in Clarion presbytery now and is doing in made a dash for it, and when they got it as elsewhere good work. May he live long and prosper.—Big Run Tribune.

Johnsonburg Will Celecrate.

They are preparing to celebrate the Fourth of July in grand style at Johnsonburg this year. The business men of the place are lending their support to the project and every effort will be put forth to make the celebration a big success. There will be fantastic parade, several bands of music, races, games, baseball, fireworks and all the other concomitants of an old-fashioned Independence Day demonstration.
