

DECREE AFFECTING MANY LOCAL CATHOLIC PRIESTS

Many priests of the Erie diocese of the Catholic church will be affected by a new decree of the Constitorial congregation, which will be made effective as soon as possible. By this decree they will be placed in the position of an irremovable rector. There are now about half a dozen priests in this diocese who come under this designation which means that they can only be ordered to other pastorates for canonical reasons.

The new decree provides that no priest can be removed from his parish excepting on trial, and nine causes for action against him are named. These include perpetual incapacity, loss of reputation, administration, confirmed disobedience and gross neglect of duties.

The decree is interpreted as a definite pronouncement on the authority of the bishops. It is regarded as safe-guarding the episcopal powers for the benefit of those who come under the jurisdiction.

While priests have always had the right to appeal to Rome, the new decree is regarded as giving to all priests a fuller opportunity to be heard if they should be brought up for discipline.

As a general rule, such regulations as these are seldom invoked in the affairs of the Catholic church, a simple request from their bishop being all that is needed to induce pastors to leave one field of labor for another.
