Reynoldsville Boy Describes Puerto Rico

other end, and it was necessary for us to travel clear across the island. The ride was picturesque, from the narrow gauge railroad with a little engine to the ever changing scenery, which is magnificent. Ex-President Roosevelt visited it, looked upon it with rapture and said, "This, surely, is America's Alps."

But the people appeal to you more than anything else. This island surely is the land of the "Manana," which means "tomorrow," because the people always promise to do things by saying, "Manana."

The people here are a mongrel race, being intermingled with Indian, Spanish and negro blood, with more negro blood than anything else. It is very hard to find pure Castilian blood in any family on the island. But that does not seem to mar their tempers. They are hot headed and quick to fight, but it is just like a rush of blood to the head, over in a minute. They are the Americans in every way possible and the whole town seems to judge one down here and if you are found wanting, they soon tell you about it. They are like the Southern negro, happy all the year around. The people do not do any more work than just enough to keep body and soul together. Every Sunday morning it is very easy to find four or five dances going on among the better class as well as the poorer people. These dances are held in their own homes, and it seems impossible that so many people can dance in the rooms.

The school children here are much more easily controlled than those in the States, and they all seem to have inherited the art of flattery from their Latin ancestry. They all have an intense desire to learn, especially the English language. They are generous to a fault. They bring in oranges, bananas and all kinds of tropical fruit. You can get oranges very cheap, from 3 to 50 for 1 cent, varying in different parts of the island, and 25 cents for a bunch of bananas is a munificent price.

Aguailla, the name of the town that we are located in, means "fresh water," because this was where Columbus landed October 8, 1492, to get fresh water for his ships. It is a beautiful little city of about 20,000, but it does not cover as much area as Reynoldsville, because a great number of the poorer classes live in small one roomed thatched huts and from ten to a dozen people seem to thrive there. The birth rate is very high from tuberculosis on this account. Every town down here has a large central plaza, where the people congregate every evening. In the larger towns they have band concerts twice a week, and we have the pleasure of listening to a few in San Juan. It was a picturesque sight. Men in white flannels and linen and the women in all the latest styles and all colors of the rainbow. It certainly was an amazing sight, with their unceasing promenading from one end of the plaza to the other. The bands played the popular airs and the selections that received the greatest applause were from "The Merry Widow." I would like to take you there for the finish of the program. I would like to be able to thrill you as their last piece thrilled us. The concert was over at 10:00 p. m. Just before their last selection everything was in a soothing cauldron of talk, so it seemed to me, when suddenly the band seemed to say:

"O say! can you see by the dawn's early light,
So proudly we halled at the twilight's last gleaming,
The trumpeters, became still and all thought of talking was banished from every mind. Puerto Rican as well as American, for the Ricans seem to realize what it means. Every American lifted his hat and involuntarily their eyes wandered to "Old Glory" as she floated over Morro Castle. And they stood thus at attention until the last strains of that grand old tune had died away. Every American heart has gone back across 1,500 miles of blue sea, where that flag stands as an emblem of eternal freedom that we hold dear; and it is also the emblem of freedom to the Puerto Rican mind. I wish that every school child in Reynoldsville could have felt as I did, and that they, instead of passing the old flag without a glance, would take of their hats and reverence it as we should reverence "Old Glory".

THE LECTURE OF BYRON PIATT.

The lecture of Byron C. Piatt in Assembly hall Friday night was unusual in its plain dealing with a subject usually tabooed, through prudery, in polite society. He had been advertised to speak on "The Mass vs. The Man," but at his own request was allowed to give instead "American Morals." He handles the subject without gloves and points out not only the evil that exists but the causes that produce it and which will, in his estimation, ultimately break up the American home if not checked. Piatt is eloquent, but the force of his lecture lies in its painful truthfulness. To deliver such a lecture before an audience composed for the most part of the feminine sex, and a large portion of them of immature years, is somewhat daring, but in line with Piatt's own belief that the safe guard of American womanhood is not innocence but virtue and knowledge. Innocence, he states, is nothing but ignorance, and the direct cause of the downfall of hundreds of young men and women annually. The lecture was well received by local people and perhaps the highest compliment that could be paid to it was the practically unanimous approval voiced by the older people present after it was over.

BAZAAR AND SUPPER.

The Altar Society of the Catholic church will hold a bazaar in the Knights of Columbus rooms, over the Keystone Hardware, on Friday and Saturday evenings, December 9 and 10, 1910.
