ABRAHAM! OH! ABRAHAM!

Air—Maryland my Maryland!

The Tyrant's reign will soon be o'er,

Abraham! Oh Abraham!

You soon shall leave Potomac's shore,

Abraham! Oh Abraham!

Good bye to you, we most abhor,

You soon must fall, to rise no more,

Our "Little Mac" will peace restore;

Abraham! Oh Abraham!

Our liberties you shall not steal,

Abraham! Oh Abraham!

In Niggers you shall cease to deal,

Abraham! Oh Abraham!

Our "Little Mac" will make you feel

A wound that you can never heal,

And you can dance the Nigger reel,

Abraham! Oh Abraham!

Your Abolition's very strong

Abraham! Oh Abraham!

Your Angels never can be wrong,

Abraham! Oh Abraham!

In darkness you can sing your song

And as your Darkies move along

You'll fly before McClellan's throng,

Abraham! Oh Abraham!

Your plotting will be all in vain,

Abraham! Oh Abraham!

In Washington you can't remain,

Abraham! Oh Abraham!

For we'll throw off the Tyrant's chain,

And you we never will maintain,

And over us you'll never reign,

Abraham! Oh Abraham!

We soon will lay you in the dust,

Abraham! Oh Abraham!

your politics are bound to rust,

Abraham! Oh Abraham!

Go up Salt River, Abe you must

For in McClellan we shall trust,

And to his country he'll be just,

Abraham! Oh Abraham!

With Andy Johnson as your chum,

Abraham! Oh Abraham!

You soon shall leave your white house

home,

Abraham! Oh Abraham!

To little Mac you will scumb,

Nor will you dare to fire a gun,

For he will make your Shoddies run,

Abraham! Oh Abraham!

From Tyrant's chains we will be free

Abraham! Oh Abraham!

From War and ruin, and from thee

Abraham! Oh Abraham!

Here's to our Nations liberty,

And death to traitors such as thee

For you shall ever, ever be

Abraham! dead Abraham.

A WAR TALE.

CHAPTER ONE.

It was night—the hub of it.

"And now, daughter, go to your retreat! Muchly as I love and scypher-like as your frail body is to me, I tell you, nymph, thou shalt never marry

Thophilus. He is poor; you are rich.

The noble house of Squiggers shall not be dishonored by menial blood!"

CHAPTER TWO AND THREE.

"Thophilus Honobala go hence!—

How dare you a hired man, in the employment of your Mehitable's father,

look on my child to woo? Begone!

You have no position. My nymph-like child shall never wed and bear children

to any man who is not noble!"

CHAPTER FOUR.

"Come to the window, my child!"—

It was June. "Why art thou so cast down, wasted beauty?" She had grown thin in meat. "I will find for thee a fitting mate, sweet bird of song,"

Mehitable sang a little while washing dishes.

What! ho! without! Somebody was knocking on the door so hard as

"ter tibel." The door couldn't stand

the pressure, and it flew.

CHAPTER FIVE.

"H-a-a-ah!" spoke in gentle terms

the intruder. It was General Theophilus

Honobala.

"Th-e-e-e!" That's what Mehitable gave utterance to.

"Yes! 'tis he! I come! Stand back, old man, to the rear! Ten paces back, ward, march!"

Old Squiggers retrograded, "cause Theophilus had a whang-striker in both hands, red with—rust.

"Now, old man," said the general. "I come to claim my bride—I am a B. G.—brigadier general. Three long months have flowed. I am now a great man. Seest thou this pile of gold? I have a million. I have houses and land. I have a position. I have honor. I wrote a puff for my major general. I was given a brigade. For fifty dollars worth of mules I bribed the telegraph to record my daring deeds. The President rewarded me. I am a General of Ethiopians!"

Then whispered the sire: "General, are you honest?" "Are I honest? Do the word exist? I are. It do. Else I were not a general."

"Then take her, I am satisfied. The country is safe—my children be happy!" And he took her.

Sensitive lady from the country looking for a coach. "Pray, sir, are you engaged?" Cabman. "Och, bless your party soul, madam, I have been married these seven years, and have nine children."

"Would you like to subscribe for Dickens's Household Words?" inquired a magazine agent. "Household words have played the dickens with me long enough," was the fooling reply.
