A Liberal Education.

The late Professor Huxley held this opinion as to what constitutes a liberal education: The man has a liberal education who has been so trained in youth that his body is the ready servant of his will and does with ease and pleasure all the work that, as a mechanism, it is capable of.

Opium Eating in the Orient.

Opium eating, according to the Maharaja Bahadur of Burhanga, is a practice practiced in Rajputana on festive occasions as a token of welcome to guests and friends. When two enemies wish to end a long standing feud, they generally go through the following ceremony: They each drink a small quantity of the preparation of opium called "amul."

Unequal Distribution.

"I've been reading a strange story in the paper," said Miss Serleaf to her friend, Mrs. Sargent. "What is it?" "It's about a man who came home after an absence of 12 years and found his wife married to another."

Alghan Ways.

The Afghans have a noble maxim, worthy of any state: "If thou hast, eat; if thou hast not, die." Unfortunately they do not live up to that, and in practice it becomes: "If thou hast, eat; if thou hast not, take." The ideal of a man is to live on his neighbors.

It Makes a Difference at 2 A. M.

"No, gentlemen, I never have any trouble going home late. If my wife's sitting up for me, I stoop down and kiss her—forehead, not mouth, of course—and say, 'Why, little dear, you shouldn't have sat up so long for me.' And then I get off that old one about sitting up with a..."

Couldn't See the Joke.

One evening last week there sat in a North Side back garden two stout old Germans enjoying their pipes and lager beer and placidly listening to the strains of an orchestra. In moving his chair one of them stepped on a parlor match, which exploded with a bang.

Firemakers.

One of the Kaffirs had two sticks for making fire, and he showed us how he did it. One of the sticks was about 15 inches long and about half an inch in diameter. The other was flatter and had already in it several shallow round holes made by setting fire on former occasions.

The Old Fashioned Flowers.

"What do I care for crechids and American Beauties and all those other expensive things under glass? How much does it please me to have two great big, tamped beds of gladioli and foliage plants in the front yard, one on each side of the steps? No; what I want is a bed of pansies, and some espres vines running up strings to the top of a pole. As soon as I get poor enough to afford it I am going to have a lot of phlox and London pride and bachelor's buttons out there in the back yard, and the girls can sun their clothes somewhere else."

It's hard to keep flowers in a city.

"I know it," said Mrs. Bates. "At our old home we had such a nice little rosebush in the front yard I hated so to leave it behind—one of those little yellow briar roses. No; it wasn't yellow. It was just yellow, and it always scratched my nose when I tried to smell it. But, oh, child," wistfully, "if I could only smell it now!"—With the Procession." H. B. Pulice.

A Foundation Sacrifice.

It was recently ascertained that the tower of Darrington church, about four miles from Peasemarch, had suffered some damage during the winter gales. The foundation was carefully examined, when it was found that under the west side of the tower, only about a foot deep from the surface, the body of a man had been placed in a sort of bed in the solid rock, and the west wall was actually resting upon his skull.

Bumble in Champagne.

Bumble in Champagne from sacred places, but his staff, which was the chief pipe, was and is carefully preserved in the vestries of many London churches. The glory of the staff was its knob. Some of these knobs present some very elaborate specimens of silver carrying, for, in addition to the ordinary pipe, several knobs, fluted, were used in representing buildings, crosses, crowns, medallions, statuettes and various other objects. Some of these staves have a historical interest. The head of the staff of St. Giles in the Fields, the top of which is a figure of old Time, with his scythe, is in his right hand, was used in the church in which Archbishop Laud was buried in 1623. And St. Giles, Cambridge, possesses one which was presented to the parish in 1695.—New York Herald.

Snake Battered in an Egg.

Edward Holzapf of Elizabeth township, near Calamus, Ill., went to his barnyard the other evening to collect eggs for marketing. On one nest he found a turkey hen, evidently very much perturbed, and on a second glance he found the hen was held charmed by a snake which lay coiled in the nest before her. He killed the snake and drove the turkey from the nest. Then he discovered that the egg that had just been laid was without a shell, and the membrane was drawn out at one end in perfect similitude to the head and tail of the snake. So perfect was the impression that the eyes and mouth were plainly discernible.—Exchange.
