Watched Himself Die.

"Our village doctor, good man that he was," says a woman visiting in the city from an interior town, "has just died. He was very much absorbed in his profession and studied every case, from a run of typhoid fever down to an attack of measles, as if it were his first patient. When his own mortal illness prostrated him, he diagnosed it clearly. watched his symptoms and the effect of the remedies used, and warned the attending physician several days before his death of the hopelessness of his condition, as evidenced by certain feelings no one but a professional patient, with every sense alert, could have dis covered. He was conscious up to be last and as the end approached had himself bolstered among his pillows into a half sitting position. He kept the fingers of one hand on the pulse of the other, and mgh he said nothing, the expression of his face showed that he was interest of professionally in watching himself tering at his wrist must have indicated it, for be let his fingers drop, locked around the group gathered about him as any that over shone on his face, said alond and distinctly, 'Dead now,' and was."-New York Times.
