Centuia's Rival of Roche.

Sir Boyle Roche is best known to fame as the man who smelt a rat, saw him floating in the air and nipped him the bud but the writer in the current miliar bolls from the same eminent source. For example, discoursing on the relations between England and Iceland, Sir Boyle declared that he is an hemy to both kingdoms sho wishes to diminish the brotherly affection of the two sister countries. This is however no better than the benevilent wish of the Governor of Georgia. In his speech at the last Atlanta Exposition, that the occasion might be an entering wedge which would bring about a more perfect unity between North and South.
