Japan has formally announced that the revised codes are in force, and now Americans as well as other foreigners are subject to Japanese law. We shall watch with much interest the outcome. Unquestionably the new laws are all right on paper; the diffisulty will come in their operation. In America we find it very difficult to enforce laws that do not receive the full, cordial support of the great mass of the people. Will it be any easier for Japan? For some time we have heard very little of the anti-foreign spirit in that country, and the craze of a few years since seems to have largety died away. That the feeling has gone, however, can scarcely be true. There are many Japanese still whose sonception of law is very different from ours, and there will doubtless be many instances of miscarriage of justice. We hope, however, that foreigners will be patient, and, realizing that there is still need for education, give the new system the benefit of the doubt when it seems to work hardship. Japan has done nobly. It is too much to expect that progress shall be uniform. Give her time, and she will show excellent results.

Romance of a decidedly characteristic sort marked the courtship of the fron Chancellor. Bismarck's youth, to may the least of it, was not a calm one, and when he won the affections and sought the hand of Fraulein von Puttkamer, her parents, who were strait-laced and conservative, were far from pleased, and they at once forbade their daughter even to think of a suitor who represented all that they disliked. But they had to deal with a man who refused to be thwarted in any of his purposes, and they found that their opposition was useless and even dangerous. Finding himself unwelcome, Bismarck adopted a plan which, unconventional as it was, met with full success. Having been inif he called, and knowing that the interests. Young people participating in the agricultural contest are request to send their names and addresses to the editor of the Telegram. In the latter part of August the three gentlemen will visit the gardens personally and decide upon the merits of each.
