A Maine weather prophet says: "Snow will come in November and stay on all winter. Lumbermen will have a full hundred days of good sledding and the drives next spring will be the largest for fifty years, because there will be enough snow to get out every log that is cut. A cold snap will come on about Christmas and last for about two weeks, in which time there will be great suffering from frost bites. Otherwise the winter will be all that one can desire."

A VERY CLOSE CONTACT.

Ebensburg and Patton Play Football and Neither Sides Score.

The Ebensburg High School football team met the Patton Juniors on the fair grounds at the county seat Thursday afternoon. The game started at 3:30 and at the end of two halves of twenty and fifteen minutes, respectively, neither side had scored. The contest was a very exciting one and some excellent playing was done on each side.

The contest was witnessed by a large crowd, including a great many school teachers of the county who were attending the institute, which adjourned fifteen minutes early in order to permit them to be present.

One accident resulted—the injury of Jesse Davis, one of the Ebensburg players, who had a bone in his arm broken and his wrist dislocated.

The referee was Editor Evans and the time keeper M. D. Kittell. Each Our boys put up a wonderful game when a person takes into consideration that the Ebensburg team had several men playing with them.

I was induced to try Foley's Kidney Cure, and one bottle entirely relieved me. I gladly recommend it to any one especially my friends among the train men who are usually similarly afflicted." ### Value of a Faulty Face.

An employee of the Tribune news found the fact that his face was familiar to the late Joseph Medill decidedly to his advantage. In the last years of his life Mr. Medill did not spend much time in Chicago and took no active part in the management of his paper, but when he was in the city he went to his office pretty regularly.

He knew all the old faces, but few of the new ones, and it was too late in life for him to ascertain himself to them. He never knew to whom to give "copy" that he wished printed in the morning paper. It happened one day that a representative of another paper who chanced to be in the building. The man had been employed on the Tribune some years previously, so his face was familiar to Mr. Medill, while the face of the man then actually in his employ were not.

One day he suddenly inquired what had become of the old night editor.

"He's in Boston," was the reply.

"Well, I want him," said Mr. Medill. It was explained that the man had an excellent place in Boston and probably would not come back, but Mr. Medill insisted that he wanted him.

"I know him," he said, "and I want a familiar face in that room. I want some one who isn't a stranger to me. Tell him that Medill wants him."

So the man with "the old familiar face," although he was not an old man by any means, went back to the Tribune on his own terms—Yonah's Companion.

A Glimpse of the Japanese. Mrs. Buck Fraser, the author, set- ter of an English diplomat and wife of Japan Crawford, says of her life in Japan, in which her husband was minister from Great Britain.

The absence of snobbishness and kindred vices in Japan impressed itself very clearly upon me. There are two characteristics of the Japanese which stand out very boldly. Home life is paramount and the possession of money is but lightly regarded. Any one who would pretend to be richer than he is would be calmly avoided as a fool. Money is not spoken of, the absence of it is not a disgrace. For a person living in a poor way gives a great deal of pleasure and is not inhibited at having to show his poverty.

The rich man does not overvalue him with his riches. He shows you one beautiful object from his collection at a time in an empty room, brightly colored and perfectly proportioned, clean and cleanliness. These people travel through life as lightly weighed, their requirements are so few in the material order, that they seem independent as the swallows and fly where they are weighed down by the conventional ideas of the world.

But the best of all things very precious, is home and self respect, the love of their children, the harmony of the family, the preservation of their own commonwealth of becoming, they are things for which they will sacrifice much.

Had Forty Homes. Volcan, the painter, was a unique personage even among the old characters of Paris. While he was essentially a Bohemian there were times when even his patience was taxed to the utmost and to obviate the necessity of meeting uncooperative people he conceived the idea of multiplying his lodging places.

At the time of his death he owned no less than 40 homes all in apartment houses, situated in all the out of the way corners of Paris, plainly furnished and with just enough accommodation for himself. He changed from one to the another all the time, in order to escape importunate acquaintances and to take refuge from his friends. It was in order to throw them all off the scent that he engaged rooms all over the city.

He finally died in the Rue de Dunkerque, where he had as many as three different apartments, all within a stone's throw of one another.

A French Joke. Two tramps on the banks of the Seine. "How can we raise the wind?" "I'll have it. You throw yourself in, and I'll jump in after you and take you out." "Then I'll get the reward from the humane society."

"Good! Here goes!" He jumped into the water, and after floundering about for some time he was getting tired out. "Well," he asked, "how long are you going to remain sticking there? Why don't you come in and take me out?" "Because I think I might make more out of you in the morgue."—Paris Journal.

Corrected. "In your first edition," said the judges' benchman, "you say Judge Egan throughout yesterday's session of court, was as drunk as it was possible for him to be." He was sober, and I want you to correct it.

"All right," replied the editor of the Evening Wasp. "We'll change it in our next edition. You're welcome. Good day, sir." (Pause.) Mr. Deplunker, strike out "drunk" and insert "sober" in that paragraph."—Philadelphia Press.

Hit Hard. "Your husband is not looking well to-night, Mrs. Rhymer?" "He isn't, and far not surprised at it."

"Not. Has he been overworking himself?" "It isn't that so much, it's his originality. Why that man is struck by so many original ideas that his mind must be one mass of bristles!"

Family Secrets. Inquisitive Rebtive. Willie, what floor do you live on in the apartment house in the big city?

Willie on a visit—Mamma says I mustn't tell stories.—Chicago Tribune.

Many people worry because they have heard that... The chances are that their hearts are all right but their stomachs are unable to digest food... C. W. Hodgkins.
