THE MAN THAT BLOWS HIS BUGLE.

The man that blows his bugle, you may not admire his style: You may claim he is conceited and condemn him all the while; You may term his method brazen or may even call it "brass," And the language that he uses you may designate as "gas;" You may disapprove his manners as you pass them in review, For no gentleman would burrow to the deeds that he will do, But I think I ought to mention, for to me it's very clear, That the man that blows his bugle is the fellow that we hear.

I've known some men whose bugles made a cracked, discordant note, Somewhere between a peacock's yell and anthem of a goat, And the people who first heard it always seemed to shrink and quail. While they said, "Of course he's bugling, but he ought to be in jail." But these men kept blowing, blowing, till the anxious, hurried throng Said, "There must be merit in it or they wouldn't blow so long;" So they sort of paused to listen to the discords that they made, And the men that blew their bugles won the game that they had played.

is world is not exceeding wise; we're not so very clear And so we listen sagely to some bugle as it yells
In a doleful jubilate that its owner's glory tells;
And many an artist's honored because his bugle blew,
And many a poet's lauded for his self-laudation, too.
Oh, I tell you o'er and o'er, for I've watched this earthly groove,
That the man that blows his bugle is the fellow we approve.

Don't deem me pessimistic, for this thought in me has birth,
That somewhere is a standard that will place us at our worth.
Our human judgment erreth, and we're apt to judge a bird
By the feathers that it weareth, though we shouldn't, I have heard,
And while this fact is still a fact we'll be inclined, I know,
To "size" the bugler's merit by the vigor of his blow,
And so I'm still insisting, for to me it's very clear,
That the man that blows his bugle is the fellow that we hear.
—Alfred J. Whitehouse, in Sunset.

hands to the edges. Then cautiously

While he was thus dangling over the rim of the ledge he heard a shrill, pierc ing scream directly overhead, and looked up to see both the old eagles hovering along the scarp, not a bow

One of them had poised, flapping its

The lad made a frantic effort to draw

He had drawn himself half-way up.

buffet from the eagle's wing. He was Like a falling stone he dropped to the shelf below, and would have tumbled

For a moment Lone Boy hung, clinging to these boughs, half-suspended swooped at him, screaming wrathfully.

The leaning pine had grown a net-

The lad lay very still within his reature and by the worried screams

Lone Boy now crawled cautiously out of his hiding place. His first move pov-like was to pounce upon the young

In a brief time, sitting astride th

two, the lad had cut strings from his grew close to their nest. He tied them just far enough apart so that they

When this was done he began to take account of his situation; and very soon, upon keen scrutiny of the ledge above and below, he discovered that without rescue by some passing hunter or person in search of him, there could

He was trapped as the wolf i fawn. The narrow shelf upon which the eagles' nest had been built, and from which the leaning pine had grown, was only some ten steps in length, and but a pace or two in width at the widest. It was a hollow trough, enclosed by a basin-like rim and was filled with pine cones, needles and other rubbish. And this little shelf suspended in mid-air was half a bow hot above the bottom of the canon.

In vain Lone Boy scanned the fac of the ledge from which he had dropped. There was no possible handhold within reach, and the bushy pine had leaned so far out to eatch the sun-trapped, or even as he had snared the could not become entangled.

be no hope of escape.

their perch.

of the parent birds.

niche or coign of vantage.

shot above his head.

HEN he was yet a small lad | let himself down, clinging with both he had earned the name of "Lone Boy," because of sol- he felt with his moccasined toes the itary tramps which took face of the ledge, seeking for some him a long way from his Sioux village. He was, in fact, best content when wandering among the breaks and canons of the Smoky Hill River. At eleven years he met with an adventure which gave him another name among his people. He had learned to set snares for great wings, the tips of which almost wild animals, and one day discovered the fresh path of a doe and two fawns, brushed the rocks, and he could see the craned neck and angry red eyes of which were in the habit of going to the bird as it stooped for a swoop. drink at a certain point on the river. After several attempts Lone Boy himself upward, and in the same ineded in snaring one of the fawns. stant the eagle shot downward like a But when he came up with his game hurled missile, with a hissing scream a pair of bald eagles had already atthat set Lone Boy's nerves all a-tingle acked and killed the fawn. and was about to fling a knee upon the

The young Sioux was very angry He had intended, if he should take a rim of the rock when he got a fierce ung deer alive, to carry the animal nome for a pet. For some time he had ere this pair of eagles-at rock was broken. least, as he believed-had their nest. He had indeed planned to watch the growth of the young ones, and to lie in wait to shoot them upon their first headling into the canon but for the friendly leaning pine, which stretched unwary descent from their aerie. It some limbs across the path of his dewas sometimes quite easy to secure the much prized tail feathers of the bald eagle in this way.

However, there was always the risk over the depths; then he scrambled to that another hunter might be on the watch and so secure the prize at the did this just in time to escape a fresh opportune moment. Upon reflection, onset from one of the eagles, which Lone Boy determined at once to attempt a capture of the young eagles, and so to revenge himself upon the work of small limbs, and its foliage parents birds for the killing of his was very dense. Crawling under the drooping boughs, Lone Boy was able than once, from an opposing More than once, from an opposing height, he had marked the position of the eagles' nest. The huge pile of the eagles' nest. The huge pile of the keen eyes of the eagles. Yet the birds continued to wheel about their sticks was built upon a cleft rock near aerie, noisily excited for a time. to the top of a cliff which overhung bed of a canon. This cliff was nearly a half-day's journey up the river, but Lone Boy set out at the coyote's gait, and before had reached the crest of the neight directly above the nest.

Here he seated himself beneath a pine and watched. Presently he saw ooth the old eagles sail away into the

Then Lone Boy rose and began the descent-a perilous business. Hitherto he had refrained from attempting it hiding, the old eagles became calmer cause of the apparent impossi and after a time seemed to have forgot bility of bringing the birds back, even should he succeed in reaching their perch. Now he had determined to They finally sailed away in search of fresh prey. descend upon them if he could, and to pitch them off into the canon, where he could pluck the coveted feathers a

To go directly down the face of the eagles, giving them no opportunity to ledge was impossible; so he made his flop off their perch and into the canon. way along the seams and crevasses of the crowning rocks, keeping in view a buckskin leggings, and made fast a leg of each bird to pine shrubs which much as possible the top of a leaning pine which stood beside the eagles

For some lengths of his body the descent was easier than the lad had thought, and he was already calculating with much satisfaction that he could really bring those young eagles up, one at a time, when he came to a izontal crevasse which he knew to be the main obstacle to success.

agerly he stretched his length upon a sharp crown of rock and peered down upon a shelf some yards below, where the leaning pine had its root. Near th tree was a heap of sticks, bones, feathers and refuse, and two great squabs of birds, feathered yet downy sprawled upon the pile.

It was such a little way to drop, and vet, crane his head as he might. Lone by could see no shrub nor projection which he might lay hold upon.

He crawled along the rim of the evasse, looking down from every pos sible point of view; but everywhere the ne dipped inward, the edges of the rocks projecting like the lim of a basin the eagles' aerie.

Finally, almost despairing, the lad light that fts flimsy tops came nowhere ear the rock dim al

If within a very few days some one should pass within hailing distance, there would be a chance of rescue; otherwise not.

Again the lad crawled within the tent-like shelter of the pine, where for a time he watched the uneasy eaglets flop about and peck at the annoying strings which hampered them. Toward night the old eagles returned, and one of them bore a cock sage-grouse in its talons.

Lone Boy was near to laughter when the dead bird was deposited upon the nest, for the tied eaglets struggled spitefully, jerking the quarry back and forth, flapping their wings, and pulling against each other for possession. In the meantime the old eagle sat with a solemn look of inquiry upon its face, and finally flew away, croaking in apparent disgust.

The boy crawled from hiding. Some of that grouse he rust have, and he secured the leg and a portion of the breast for his supper. This, of course, he was forced to eat raw.

That night he slept fitfully, and before morning his throat was parched with thirst. When an eagle brought a rabbit to the aerie, and he had secured a portion, he was unable to eat m than a mouthful or two. So he lay within the pine's shelter, watching the eagles, and listening for any stir of life which should betoken a hunter within sound of his voice.

The eaglets had grown sullen pulling at the strings, and each lay or sat upon its own side of the nest, sourly dozing, except when a parent bird appeared. Then there were strange con ortions of the body, with wings raised aloft and gaping red maws. Lone Boy now noted, too, that the old birds fed their young separately, apparently accepting the situation without further nquiry. After bringing some small bird or animal, either eagle would sit for a time perched and preening, upon some near-by crag, wholly oblivious of its rapacious, gorging offspring.

Watching these birds, Lone Boy re-tained his interest in life for another sun; then the fever of thirst consumed For several days he lay under the pine in a semi-conscious state Half the people of his village might have passed through the canon looking for him, and he could not have heeded, much less have answered, their calls.

Then, on a cool morning, when a neavy dew was glittering upon the pine needles, he came suddenly into possession of his faculties. strangely light of head and body, but with every sense alert, he came out

He felt as if walking upon air, and stood upon the rock rim, looking down canon, feeling that he was quite capable of jumping down there upon the sands without taking hurt. If only he might jump far enough! He looked down at his hands and bare arms, which appeared to be nothing but skin and bone, and a startling flung backward, and his hold upon the thought came into his mind.

Why not take the young eagles and ump! They would help to bear up jump! his lightened weight!

No sooner thought than put in execution. He turned to the eaglets, untied the hissing, pecking birds, now almost full-grown and full-feathered, and cut the thongs which bound them. They flanned their wings strongly, and nearly wrenched their legs out of his safety under the sheltering pine. He weak hands.

Then, in a sudden, desperate rush he bore them over the verge of the rock shelf and dropped into the spaces of the canon. Down, down, the dropped, the boy's arms wide-spread and the eaglets flapping their untried wings. The descent was appallingly swift, but the vigorous efforts of the birds met with various misfortunes, the carried the trio forward in a slant greatest of which was the slaughter of stories: which plunged them into the sand at Lone Boy staggered to his feet, alive and whole.

shelter, peering from under cover at the pair of newly fledged eaglets, which Still dizzy and feeling very queer had flopped awkwardly off their pile of the lad saw the earth spin round him for a moment. Then again tying the sticks when the intruder dropped upon eaglets' legs, he staggered to the river a half bow'shot's distance. These young birds now hugged the rock ledge with bodies flattened and There he quenched his thirst after the wings drooping, evidently much depressed by the descent of this strange cautious manner of his kind.

A half-hour later he was able to visit a patch of ripe raspberries, and despite his swollen tongue, to eat heartily of the luscious fruit.

However, as Lone Boy continued in A half-eaten rabbit, which he had kicked off the eagles' perch, still further renewed his vigor, and after a ten altogether the cause of alarm. half-day's rest he was able to go slowly homeward, dragging his cap-

At the Brule Sioux village, in honor of this exploit, he was named Wamblt Yuza, Catches Eagles, by which name he is known to this day .- Youth's Com-

A "Phenomenon" Indeed. A preacher, while speaking to an audience of children, chanced to make use in the course of his remarks of the "phenomenon." This rather puzzled several of his hearers, who at the close of the meeting asked to be informed of its meaning. Not knowing quite how to answer them the cher put them off until the following Sunday, when he thus explained: "If you see a cow, that's not 'phenomenon.' If you see a thistle, that's not a 'phenomenon.' you see a bird that sings, that's not a phenomenon,' either. But," he said, if you see a cow sitting on a thistle and singing like a bird, then that's a 'phenomenon.' "-The Tatler.

Disrespectful Looks Costly.

It is not uncommon for a lawyer in this country to be fined for expressing his contempt of court verbally, but abroad barristers are held to a stricter accountability. During a recent case at Darmstadt one of the counsel was declared by the judge to have looked at him "in a manner highly disrespectful." For this offense the counsel was fined $10.

A PLUCKY GIRL.

FEW years ago a wealthy woman in Denver had a housemaid who attracted the attention of such of her callers as had an eye to see, by her refinement and good breeding. After awhile she disap-eared, and her former employer was strictly non-committal as to her where bouts, saying nothing except to speak in the highest terms of her qualities. The facts of the story came into my ssion, and they were very inter-

The girl had been graduated from one of the big Eastern colleges for women. She had taken the course at the expense of strenuous sacrifice on the part of her family, and was exceedingly anxious to become an earner at once upon her graduation. She was well fitted to step at once into a good pedagogic position

But at the very moment of gradua ion, coming under the care of a physician, he told her the sad news that her lungs were in very poor condition They were not diseased, he said, and if she could go directly to a proper climate and live in it for some years they would in all probability become perfectly sound; but that by remaining where she was for the next few years she risked tuberculosis. There was tendencies of tuberculosis in her family, and she took the advice to heart.

She started straight for Colorado, hoping to get a school. But just at that time there was a serious agitation in that State over the risk to children of employing so many Eastern consumptives in the schools. In response to the searching questions of each Board of Education to which she applied, her story would come out, and she could get no school. Rather than remain a burden upon her family for another day, she took a place as second girl."

It was a pretty sad time for her. At the time of graduation she had been engaged to a young college man. He had his start in life to make, and also owed something to his family in the way of helping to educate counger children. It was impossible for them to marry for a few years. When she took the place as a servant she wrote releasing him from the engagement. The man, however, refused the release He wrote her to hold on, to get as much outdoor life as possible, build up her health, and eventually they would work out the problem. Two years later he stepped into a professor's berth in a college in the Middle West. pay was not plutocratic, but it -New York Sun.

THROUGH THE BUSH.

From Oxford to Matabeleland is a in the New York Evening Post of most of their cattle by lions. Only travelers had to journey by foot. In that some one was killed, two despet

Our provisions began to grow low. We ran successively out of jam, corn, those days was to shoot on sight. vegetables, coffee, sugar, and, what was more serious, our ammunition be gan to fail, and we were reduced to two cartridges a day. It was not yet meat, which keeps good for an indefi-

"Do you think you could steer a straight course through the bush? the captain asked me one day. I said I thought so.

The captain snorted a little con temptuously.

'I want you to go there." he said, pointing to a high range of kopjes five miles away. "Plant a large flag on the top of the highest hill you find. It is to serve as the apex of the triangle we have been measuring. Start early to-morrow and guide yourself by the sun, allowing for its ascent

I started at dawn, carrying an ax and a large roll of calico for the flag. I reached the kopje shortly before noon, and after climbing with difficulty the great boulders, saw a higher range at the back. On the top of this I planted the flag securely, and after resting a bit started on my return with a light heart.

I had been walking for about three hours when my first doubts assailed me. It was growing dusk, the kopjes stood behind me, rows on rows, alike. There was no landmark to guide me. I was lost.

I wandered about for more than two hours. The sun went down and the moon came out. To be lost in the bush is a serious matter. Suddenly, in the stillness of the night, I heard a beautiful sound, like a high note drawn by a master on some old violin. It migh have been a mile away, and it rose and fell plaintively on the breeze. It was a lion, lifting up his voice by a pool.

I proceeded in the opposite direc Luckily it was the right one, and after a few miles I came upon the traces of our last night's camp. I fol-lowed our wagon trail, and just as the sun rose came upon my party

The captain met me with the infornation that the ammunition was gone Later one of us discovered a cartridge in the bottom of the cart, and brought down a duck. That night we had dinner for the last time in six days. Af-terward we were reduced to half a pound of flour a day, which we mixed nto a gruel and boiled.

On the fourth day all our supplies were gone. The last two days are hardly a memory to me. I remember trudging beside the cart, hearing the racking of the whip as the driver harried the weary oxen over the veld. At last, on the sixth day, we saw the houses of the settlement in the mirage two feet above the level of the plain.

MOUNTAIN TREASURE.

Dr. Augustus C. Hamlin, who died ately at his home in Bangor, was the owner of the Mount Mica mine, in the own of Paris, one of the most remarkable places in the world for its production of tourmalins. The story of the finding of these beautiful geme reads like a fairy-tale.

Not far from the little village of Paris Hill, Maine, rises an elevation known as Mount Mica, from the great sheets of mica which glisten on its sides. Under that shining surface the and white rocks have kept a gray ecret for ages.

In 1820 two students, Elijah Hahlin and Ezekiel Holmes, were searching the vicinity for specimens of minerals It was near nightfall on a cold autumn day, and they were about to turn their faces homeward when Hamlin caught sight of something sparkling at the roots of a tree. He picked it up, and found it to be a fragment of a clear green crystal. As it was too dark to look farther, the young men marked the spot, intending to return to it the next morning. That night a heavy snow-storm set in, and the ground was deeply covered for the winter.

When the spring came the two students were on the spot, eager for their unknown treasure. And they were not disappointed. The removal of a few handfuls of earth laid bare a shining store of brilliant green, pink and white crystals. Other cavities were found, and the enthusiastic discoverers promptly picked all these outside "pockets" of Mount Mica.

Specimens were sent to Professor Silliman, who pronounced the beautiful stones to be rare specimens of tourma-The mine is still being worked, and doubtless the gray granite, the white feldspar and the rose-streaked quartz of that hill-country cover many a rich hoard of brilliant gems.

FRONTIER STORIES.

Judge Edward Fenton Colborn, now of Salt Lake but an oldtime Kansan, tells this one on Bat Masterson:

In early days at Dodge City Bat was something of a practical joker as well as a gun player. An old character, such as may be seen hanging about saloons, sat one day in a chair in the Last Chance, leaning against the wall. He was a great fellow to brag about how brave he was and that enabled them to marry, and the housemaid became a professor's wife. in his gunstock.

Masterson wanted to try the nerve of the old fellow, so he placed a cannon firecracker under his chair, lighted the fuse, and then, to attract long distance, and from the life of a college student to that of a surveyor new gun to look at. The firecracker in South Africa a far cry. A recent went off with a bang that shook the graduate of the English university tells | walls. The old fellow leaped into the air like a winged Indian, and, throwing dangerous and trying journey through the gun on the floor, made for the the bush. The party of surveyors had door, yelling, "I'm killed, I'm killed!" This is another of Judge Colborn's two were left to draw the cart. The West, and hardly a night passed but this fashion the party turned back ate men met at a bar. They had had toward their starting place, Bulawayo. some trouble before and no further words were necessary. The thing in One of the men pulled his gun and fired, but his aim was bad, and the bullet struck the other man in one of The man who had received hot enough to make "biltong," a dried the wound made better work of it and put a bullet through his enemy's reast. He staggered, mortally wound ed, and cried out: "You have killed me!"

Quick the answer came back from the one who was shot in the leg:

"You haven't got any the best of me, you cur. I'm killed, too!" But he still lives .- Denver News

LOGGER KILLS A COUGAR. Jesse Hendricks, a logger of Holton town about twenty-five miles from Portland, on the Oregon side of the Columbia, was in the city recently en deavoring to dispose of the pelt of a cougar he had killed in the morning back of the logging camp in which he is employed. Upon arising in the morning Hendricks noticed fresh tracks near the camp, and calling his dogs tracked the cougar to the forest, where the beast was treed and shot by the huntsman. The cougar had been feeding on the arcasses of two deer that had fallen victims to the rapacious beast. The animal measured seven feet from tip to tip, and its coat was sleek and thick, denoting that it had not been suffering from lack of food. Hendricks says that the cougars have been wag ing a war of extermination upon the deer of Columbia and Clatsop counties and that a bounty should be offered for all pelts secured .- Portland Ore-

How He Left Her.

A prominent man called to condone with a lady on the death of her husband, and concluded by saying, "Did he leave you much?"

"Nearly every night," was the reply. -Ladies' Home Journal.

DAZED WITH PAIN. The Sufferings of a Citizen of Olympia,

L. S. Gorham, of 516 East 4th St., Olympia, Wash., says: "Six years ago noticed a change for the better. The kidney secretions had been disordered and irregular, and contained a heavy sediment, but in a week's time the urine was clear and natural again and the passages regular. aching and soreness left my back and then the lameness. I used six boxes to make sure of a cure, and the trouble has never returned."

Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Photographing Thought.

That brain waves, or what may be so termed, are capable of producing photographic effects is the problem that Dr. M. A. Veeder, a well-known resident of Lyons, believes he has solved.

Dr. Veeder invited several friends to the photographic study of Mr. Russell, in that village. A plate from an unopened package was put in the holder and placed on a table, the shutter being closed. Each person present placed one hand about four inches above the plate and table.

inches above the plate and table.

After an exposure in this position for about one minute the plate was taken into the darkroom and developed, whereupon it was found that a spot had formed the size and shape of a silver dollar, which, as a mat-ter of fact, was the form of the object which the persons participating in the experiment had in mind at the time.-New York Tribune

A Guaranteed Cure For Piles Itching, Blind, Bleeding, Protruding Piles, Druggists are authorized to refund money if PazoOintmentfails to cure in 6 to 14 days, 50c

Bacon valued at $30,000,000 was imported by Great Britain in 1904. STOPS BELCHING BY ABSORPTION

-NO DRUGS-A NEW METHOD. A Box of Wafers Free-Have You Acute Indigestion, Stomach Trouble, regular Heart, Dizzy Spells, Short Breath, Gas on the Stomach?

the Stomach?

Bitter Taste—Bad Breath—Impaired Appetite—A feeling of fullness, weight and pain over the stomach and heart, sometimes nausea and vomiting, also fever and sick headache?

What causes it? Any one or all of these: Excessive eating and drunking—abuse of spirits—anxiety and depression—mental effort—mental worry and physical fatigue—absence of teeth—bolting of food.

If you suffer from this slow death and miserable existence, let us send you a sample box of Mull's Anti-Belch Wafers absolutely free. No drugs. Drugs injure the stomach.

It stops helching and cures a diseased stomach.

It stops belching and cures a diseased stomach by absorbing the foul odors from undigested food and by imparting activity to the lining of the stomach, enabling it to thoroughly mix the food with the gastric juices, which promotes digestion and cures the disease. This offer may not appear

GOOD FOR 25c. 145

3106 Send this coupon with your name and address and your druggist's name and 10c. in stamps or silver, and we will supply you a sample free if you have never used Mull's Anti-Belch Wafers, and will also send you a certificate good for 25a. toward the purchase of more Belch Wafers. You will find them invaluable for stomach trouble; cures by abscrption. Address MULL'S GRAPE TONIC Co., 228 2d Ave., Rock Island, Ill.

All druggists, 50c. per box, or by mail, upon receipt of price. Stamps accepted

Food for Squirrels.

Most people who feed the gray squirrels in the big parks fail to realize that it is no kindness to give these pretty little animals such soft shell nuts as almonds, peanuts and Human beings who do chestnuts. not have to actually forage for food naturally enough feel that it thoughtfulness itself to save the squrrels work. The fact is, however, that a squirrel's teeth grow so rapidly that, deprived of their normal use, they might even through their very uselessness become long enough to put this craming rodent of the in danger of starvation. Hickory, pecan and hazel nuts are the proper food to throw to the squirrels.

TERRIBLE SCALY ECZEMA.

Brooklyn Life.

Eruptions Appeared on Chest, and Face and Neck Were All Broken Out -Cured by Cuticura.

"I had en eruption appear on my chest and body and extend upwards and downwards, so that my neck and face were all broken out; also my arms and the lower limbs as far as the knees. I at first thought it was prickly heat. But soon seales or crusts formed where the breaking out was. Instead of going to a physician I parchase a complete treatment of the Cuticura Reviews, in which I had great fatth, and all was satisfactory. A of the Cuticura Re 20ies, in which I had great faith, and all was satisfactory. A year or two later the cruption appeared again, only a little lower, but before it had time to spread I procured another supply of the Cuticura Remedies, and continued their use until the cure was complete. It is now five years since the last attack, and have not seen any signs of a return. I have more faith in Cuticura Remedies for skin diseases than anything I know of. Emma E. Wilson, Liscomb, Iowa, Oct. 1, 1905."

A South African Exposition. Preliminary arrangements for holding a British South African exhibition in London early in 1907 have been completed by Captain Bam, a member of the Cape Parliament.

ceased Wher compling The i her fro When

When When When When When One b

on her

the inv

a city

a relia

small solicite

that sl As thi in add that sl to pay is givi from o and lo "side helps o sell at and s secret Groces

SLEE

Slipp

pretty ored ;

The consid Whe a cert skirts house name cashn with of th

ventic

plaid

over

T

One board take memb with hiss mind mom glane your menu tinct the i a lan Ho

> tentie were And maca

TH On blous worn abou

Baza