GOOD PROGRESS BEING MADE FOR 1-CENT LETTER POSTAGE

A Review of What is Being Accomplished by the National One-Cent Letter Postage Association

Nation-wide in its extent is a campaign which is being waged for the securing of one cent letter postage, a reform which would save letter users of the United States over $75,000,000 a year.

Fifty-three separate bills calling for a one cent rate on letters delivered in the city which they originate have been introduced in congress during the present session, forty-four of these being introduced in the House of Representatives, twenty-two by democrats and twenty-two by republicans. In the Senate two democrats have presented similar bills, and seven republicans have fathered measures for the lower letter postage rate. It may thus be seen that the campaign has no political significance, but that it is being waged on behalf of the letter users of the country in an earnest effort to lower the present high rate charged for carrying letters.

Back of the movement is a national organization known as the National One Cent Letter Postage Association, with headquarters at Cleveland. Charles Wm. Burrows is president, and George T. McIntosh is secretary, treasurer and general manager. The organization has a large membership in every state in the union, and is being backed by thousands of letter users in the effort to secure lower postage rates. The immediate plan of the campaign is to secure one cent letter postage on locally delivered letters in all cities and towns where deliveries are made. Later it is the purpose to secure a general one cent rate.

Several hundred national organizations have cordially endorsed the movement, and thousands of local organizations, such as Chambers of Commerce, Boards of Trade and similar bodies have given it their approval.

At the present time, according to experts who are familiar with the postal conditions at Washington, the United States government is deriving a surplus of over $75,000,000 a year on its letter postage. While a two cent rate is charged for carrying letters, it has been shown that they can be handled for one cent. The experts say that with the inauguration of a one cent letter postage rate, the increase in the volume of mail matter would recompense the government for any reduction there might be due to the inauguration of the lower rate.

Several scores of the leading members of congress are backing the movement, and working earnestly in its behalf. A series of meetings, under the auspices of the House Committee in charge of postal matters is being held, and many strong arguments are being presented in behalf of the one cent rate.

That the business of the department is rapidly increasing is indicated by the reports in the volume of mail matter carried. Further stimulus, it is claimed, will be given this increase were letter users of the country permitted to mail sealed letters under a one cent rate, particularly those letters which are subject to local delivery. It is pointed out that if a letter can be carried from New York to San Francisco for two cents, locally delivered letters could be handled for a far less sum.

That the government is now making a handsome profit is not denied. Friends of the lower rate claim that the department was never organized for the purpose of making a profit, but rather for doing business on a cost basis.

"We are in this fight to the finish," declares George T. McIntosh, secretary-treasurer and general manager of the campaign. "We have received assurances from every part of the country which leads us to believe that we will secure the undivided support of hundreds of organizations representing many thousands of users of letter postage. Congress must and will listen to our demands, and we feel confident that at no distant date a one cent letter rate will be obtained."

A. O. H. COMMEMORATES

ST. PATRICK'S DAY

Division No. 19 A. O. H., of Barnesboro and Spangler, held a social event in St. Patrick's Hall to commemorate St. Patrick's Day—March 17th—and a very fitting program was carried out.

The students of St. Patrick's Parochial School entertained the large audience with piano and violin solos and singing. Donald McNeil and Ignatius Dolan rendered appropriate solos. Both young men are accomplished singers, and consequently these numbers especially were greatly enjoyed.

At the conclusion of the entertainment rendered by the school, Mr. J. J. Hayes, chairman, made a short, but impressive introductory speech. He proved himself equal to the occasion, and concluding, introduced Mr. Martin Brady, a student of St. Francis' College. Mr. Brady's reciting was very good, and his elocutionary gestures were gracefully put into execution. He received a heavy encore.

Joseph Gray, editor of the Spangler Sun, was present, and was called on for a speech by Mr. Hayes. Mr. Gray in the introduction of his address made a few joking remarks that kept the audience in one continuous uproar. However, he got down to the vital points of his lecture, dwelling along the line of preparedness. Mr. Gray is a warm advocate of "National Preparedness" and cited a number of instances where this issue was of vast importance. Owing to the Rev. Father P. P. Corcoran limiting his time to but three hours, according to Mr. Gray's statement, the Spangler editor had to resort to drastic measures to reduce his speech. Of course this was told in Joe's own way.

Following Mr. Gray's address, the next speaker to be introduced was Dr. P. J. Kelly, of Patton, well known in this section and the entire north of the county. Mr. Kelly stated the call was entirely unexpected on his part, and as for giving an appropriate speech for St. Patrick's Day, he was unprepared. However, he made a good talk, dwelling at length upon the Irish people, of which he is a descendant. He spoke on the persecution lavished upon his native people ever since Ireland exists, and the people of that country found a refuge in the United States, such as has never been enjoyed in any other country. Mr. Kelly has appeared in public on such occasions a number of times and always responds to the call to give a speech. He received great applause.

The Spangler Band, under the able direction of Prof. Jas. A. Shannon, was present and rendered a number of pleasing selections.

Following the school children's number and addresses, the entertainment was brought to a close, and the Dolan-Kirkpatrick Orchestra furnished music for a dance.

The committee in charge was as follows: J. J. Hogan, chairman; John E. Reilly and J. L. McNeil.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the A. O. H. assisted in making arrangements for the affair and did their part nobly as the ladies always do.

Assistant Principal M. Ivo Kirsh was a visitor in Cresson and Altoona Saturday and Sunday.

The Misses Hancock, of Mahaffey, are visiting at the home of Ed. Lehmer, this week.

T. J. Sullivan, principal of the local schools, was a business caller at Ebensburg Saturday. While in that town he attended a meeting of the Cambria county principals.
