The average American citizen deeply admires a self-made man. It is a matter of fact that daily comments are heard, throughout this congressional district about the early struggle of John M. Rose. Two Autoists Are Mangled On Grade, Crossing, Cresson

CRESSON, PA., September 22d.
Special to the Courier
The Hogestown crossing, near this place was the scene Monday evening of the second fatal accident within the last two years. Dr. Thomas A. C. Kephart, one of Altoona's best known physicians, and Dr. J. B. Hahn, an Altoona dentist engaged to be married within a few weeks, were killed when their automobile was struck by the evening passenger train from Indiana.
Two years ago a party of men were hit by a train on the same crossing. One man was killed and three or four others were badly injured.
Deputy Coroner Russell Yost visited the scene of the latest fatality. The bodies of the two victims were removed to the undertaking establishment of James M. Buck, of this place, and later sent to Altoona for burial.
The two Altoona men were trying out a car that had been repaired. Employees of the garage said they believed the men would find the car in good condition. "We'll tell you how she works when we get back," one of the men called back as they started on their fatal trip.
The car was struck with force sufficient to crush it. Dr. Kephart was tossed 15 feet in the air and landed in a gully 50 feet from the track. His skull was fractured and he had fractures of both legs. He bled from the nose. His flying body drew the attention of A. A. Luther, a passenger on the train, who called the attention of the conductor to the tragedy. Dr. Hahn, when removed from the pilot of the engine, was in a badly mangled condition. His neck was broken and he had a deep laceration of the chest. He bled but little. Dr. Kephart wore a diamond ring, the set of which was knocked from its mounting when he was struck. Mrs. Henry Hostler, of this place, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Hughes of Altoona, followed closely upon the scene of the accident in a roadster. Her story of what she saw of the accident differs but little from that of others. She, too, as well as several men working on the state road, believed the men did not note the approach of the train when it was rounding the upper loop of the "S" and the surrounding hills sent the echo of the whistle in another direction. Both men expired about the same time. Dr. Kephart dying a few minutes before his companion.

The funeral of Dr. T. A. C. Kephart, was held Thursday at the Kephart home. Interment was made in Fairview cemetery, Altoona.
The father of Dr. J. B. Hahn, the second victim of the accident, arrived in Altoona Tuesday evening to take charge of his son's boy which was also shipped to Philadelphia.
