REFORESTING NOTES

That the 5,000,000 acres of barren land in Pennsylvania can be reclaimed by reforestation is finally established by reports given out by the Department of Forestry Tuesday. These reports cover the planting of 21,000,000 trees on 18,000 acres of State Forest land.

The oldest plantation on record was made in 1902 in Franklin county with two year old white pine. About Ninety per cent of these trees are now living, and they have an average height of fifteen feet and an average diameter of almost three inches at breast height. The largest one is twenty feet high, and has a diameter of almost four inches.

One forester reports a plantation in which everyone of the trees is growing. Over the state at large, from seventy-five to eighty per cent of the total number of trees planted are living. The remarkable height growth of forty-nine inches in one year is reported for a white pine in a plantation at Caledonia, Franklin county. The averages compare very favorably with figures from some of the German forests which have been under intensive management for over a century.

The showing made by the plantations is especially gratifying to the members of the Forestry Commission because of the Governor's recommendation to the Legislature that provision be made for increased activity in reforestation and forest fire prevention. They say that forestry is almost the only State enterprise which is bound to return a revenue if properly supported, and they point to the figures given above as evidence that reforestation on a large scale is practicable.

Pennsylvania set a record last year when almost 6,000,000 trees were planted in one season, and a single plantation was made which contained over half a million trees. The nurseries will produce many more trees this year, but the work of planting will be hampered considerably by scarcity of labor and lack of funds.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT PRAISES THE STATE POLICE

History of Force Written for the First Time.

Every loyal Pennsylvanian will feel a thrill of pride in reading Theodore Roosevelt's introduction to "Justice to All," the story of the Pennsylvania State Police, now written for the first time and issued this week by a well known publishing house.

"This is a volume so interesting," says Colonel Roosevelt, "and from the standpoint of sound American citizenship, so valuable that it should be in every public library in the land."

After reviewing some of the achievements of the force during the past ten years and commenting on the vividness, interest and accuracy of the work of the author, Miss Katherine Mayo, he speaks of his personal acquaintance with the rank and file of the force and concludes with exceptional praise of the entire personnel.

In "Justice to All" the author has made the presentation of the facts relating to the organization and service of this alert and hard working department of our State government as interesting as the most thrilling detective story.

We had heard of the acts of courage and heroism which have made a similar organization, the Northwestern Mounted Police of Canada, so well and favorably known, but few people realize that within our own borders we have a force with an equally splendid record of dangerous work well done. The book will prove not alone entertaining but enlightening to thousands of these quiet business-like men going about their duty of upholding the law.

Major John C. Groome, Superintendent of the Department, says of the book, "The general public knows so little of the organization and daily work of the State Police Force that I am grateful to Miss Mayo for having presented the facts in such an accurate and interesting manner."

TURNING REFUSE INTO MONEY

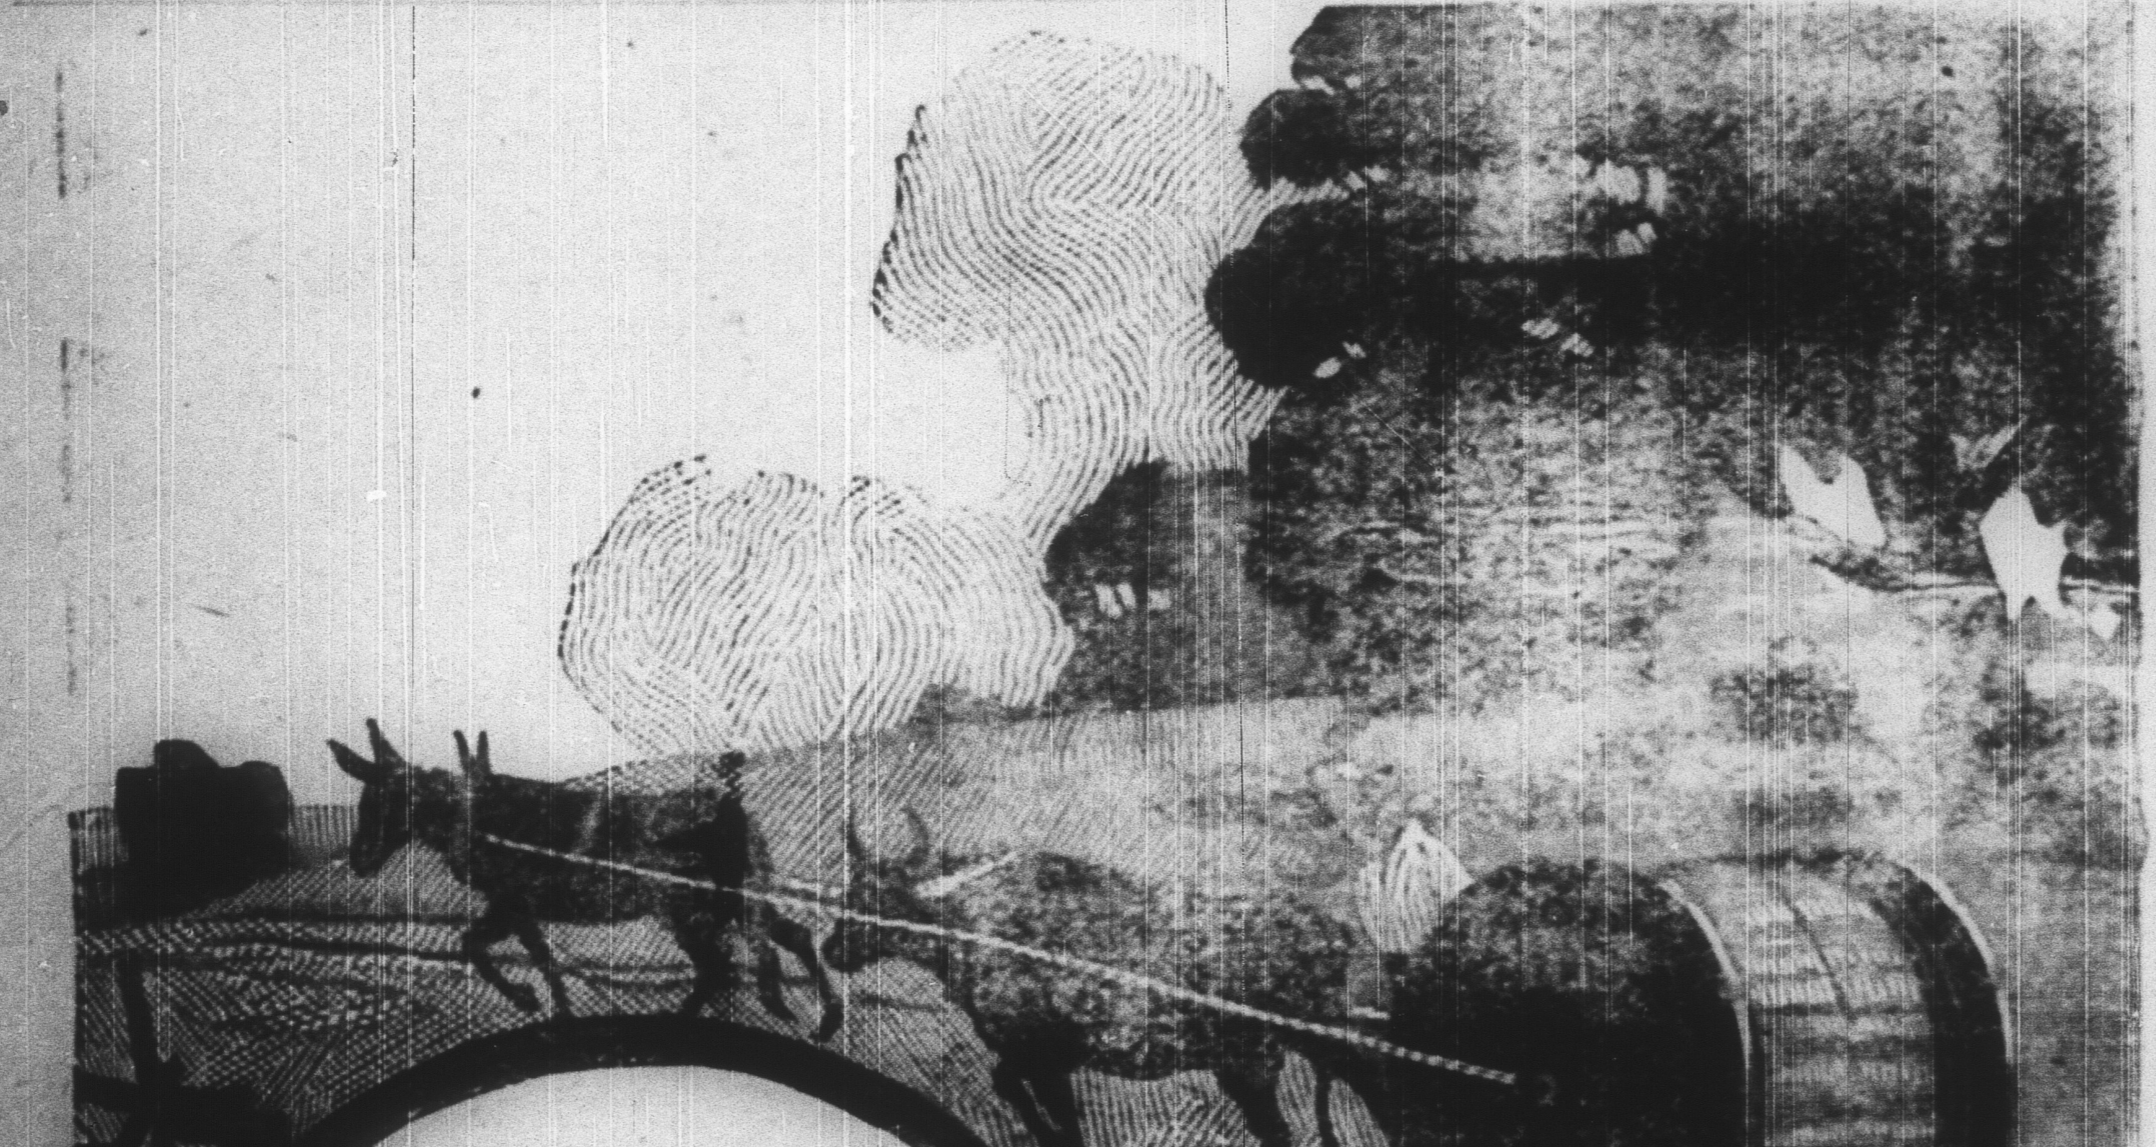

Farming would not ordinarily be considered a part of the management of a State Institution. Commissioner of Health Samuel G. Dixon has found, however, that certain kinds of farming, and stock raising in particular, combine admirably to cut the cost of caring for the 2,200 sufferers from tuberculosis who are constantly under treatment at the Mont Alto, Cresson and Hamburg Sanatoria.

Naturally in feeding this number of people there are quantities of refuse to be disposed of. When properly sterilized by the use of live steam this makes admirable food for pork. As a result each of the three institutions has in some remote portion of their extensive grounds a piggery.

More than twelve tons of pork were raised last year. Several breeds have been chosen: Yorkshire, Jersey Red, Berkshire and Poland-China.

The entire cost of the equipment necessary was more than paid for the first year the experiment was carried on, and since that time it has aided in reducing the meat bills at the institutions.
