Gloria Hope, in the "Guilty Man," playing at the Majestic Tuesday, as the daughter, and Vivian Reed, as the wronged mother, have drawn their characters with artistic touches of genius. In a broad sense the motif of the "Guilty Man" has to do with awakening conscience in a human soul of a man who has done a woman the greatest wrong that can be done her. The question confronting such is this—if a woman deserted by the man she trusted, brings forth a daughter into environments of evil, and the daughter, as a result of her surroundings, commits a crime, who is to blame?
