

WANT A PERMIT

Seek Permit for "Drink" with Less Than Half of One Per Cent Alcohol

BRENDENBURG—The regular session of the Argonne court commenced here this afternoon. Judge, J. H. Stephens, John E. Evans and Samuel Lammert, Board of Health members, were present.

Petitions were presented to the court by Attorney Philip N. Skilling, of this place, representing the South Fork Brewery Company, of Park Township, and the Governor's Licensing Commission, both of Johnstown. The petitions pray that the court issue a license to manufacture and sell a beverage containing less than one-half of one per cent alcohol by volume. The petitioners state that such beverages will be shipped into this county. The court has taken the petition under advisement and will act upon it at a later date.

A petition was presented to the court by E. H. Kane, member of the board of supervisors, that a license be issued for the sale of beer at the time of his commitment to the county jail. The petitioners state that the license is for the purpose of enabling the defendant to take such action as the law requires.

Dr. Harry J. Bennett, of this place, county jail physician, having been sworn, stated that on March 19 last he examined the defendant in the jail and that the defendant should be committed to a mental hospital for care and treatment.

Among the cases listed for argument are those in which counsel for Mayor Joseph Gifford, of Johnstown, seek new trials in the cases in which the city magistrate was convicted of fraudulent conviction, assault and battery, and non-renewal of office. Reasons for new trials were presented to the court at this time.

DON'T SAY "STOP THAT" WITHOUT SAYING "YOU MAY DO THIS"

By Dorothy Gantfield Fisher, Author of Understood Betty, The Humming Cup.

The grandmother who had brought up seven children to be grown, happy and well-learned, suddenly dropped in to see her young daughter, Elsie. She was greeted by the sound of sobbing and from behind the closed door the young mother cried, "Elsie has been naughty. She is being punished."

The grandmother sank into a chair, praying for wisdom. "I never punished one of mine in any such way in all my life," she advanced, "and she never disobeyed me, either."

"Why, Mother Burton," cried the young mother indignantly, "that's just impossible. What did you do when they didn't mind, when they acted as Elsie did just now? She was so naughty. You see that lovely set of Stevensons? I told her three separate times not to touch it, and she persisted in handling the books of the books with her sticky little fingers. What else could anybody do but punish her?"

"Well," said the grandmother, "let's consider this case. I always tried to put myself in the children's place and tried to imagine why it was they wanted to do what seemed naughty. What there was in it that attracted them. Let's look at that Stevensons set. Yes, isn't it a beauty, all red leather and gold lettering? Why, I believe it's the brightest, loveliest that fascinated Elsie. They're nothing wicked in liking pretty, bright things. She'd be a little duncer if she didn't. Why, if that had happened to me, I believe I'd have tried giving her something bright and shiny that she could play with."

"No, you don't understand Elsie," said the young mother, "that wouldn't work with her. It's stubbornness. You ought to have seen how angry she looked."

"Well, perhaps you got her mad up," suggested the grandmother, gently.

The young mother gave a skeptical, impatient gesture. "You can try it and see for yourself."

The grandmother went quickly into the kitchen while the mother was unlocking the closet door, and by the time she came out, she was back with an egg-beater and a bowl of soapy water.

Elsie looked blackly at her mother and marched straight toward the forbidden books. "You can't breathe her mother triumphantly."

"Elsie," called the grandmother brightly, "just see here what I've got. Mother says we may play with it, you and I. See, when you are at the egg-beater around, how it makes the water all fresh up. Isn't as good as foaming eggs. Come over and try it."

The egg-beater's shiny blades shone brightly as they whirled about the white substance foaming suds. Elsie was too little to contain more than one idea at a time especially when one of the ideas was such a beautiful one. She ran to the bowl and began to try to turn the beater.

At first Granmie had to hold the bowl steady, but in a moment the deft little fingers caught the trick and whirled the beater round and round. She beamed as she beat, absorbed, radiant, the bright little eyes blurred with tears brightening, the little sullen, angry face softening to a smile. "It's lovely," she pronounced solemnly.

Granmie and Mother began to talk about the weather and a new recipe for cookies. The crisis was past.

When Granmie stood up to go, half an hour later she remarked casually to Elsie, "Oh, say, dear, Mother just bought those pretty red and gold books down there. And we are afraid that if you touch them, you'll get them dirty. You'll try to remember about that, won't you? You wouldn't like Mother to spank your things?"

MILLIONS LOST THROUGH FLOODS

STEPS TO BE TAKEN TO TURN LOSSES INTO BENEFITS.

GOVERNOR SPROUL TO ACT

Order Executive of New York And New Jersey To Stop Him in Plans To Develop Streams in Public Interest.

Millions lost annually through floods in Pennsylvania have caused the state to take steps to turn the losses into benefits. The development of water power, which through greater utilization has been permitted for centuries to waste into the sea.

GOVERNOR SPROUL

Because of its unusual topography of the state, Pennsylvania is among the greatest sufferers from flood losses. The heavy spring rains that pour down on the mountains over 2,000 feet above sea level and rushing down to the valleys, create the high water level of the state's streams. For the same reason the water power possibilities are great.

One hundred and sixty of the principal towns in the state situated on these rapidly running rivers are accordingly subject to heavy flood damage, while even greater damage is visited upon the rural communities and vast agricultural areas which are annually inundated.

The people of the state are called upon to pay a quarter of a million dollars each year for the replacement of bridges alone. A vastly larger sum is paid annually by Pennsylvanians because of the loss to crops and soil fertility. The depreciation of farm land values due to their susceptibility

Not since July, 1914, local millers said, has flour been quoted under $8.00 a barrel. The regular range for family patents was $7.50 to $8.15 when sold in carlots in 28-pound cotton sacks.

Convention of Employees of First and Second Class Offices to be Held in July.

The annual convention of the Association of Postoffice clerks of the First and Second Class Offices in the State of Pennsylvania will be held in Johnstown on Sunday and Monday, July 30 and 31, when about 75 representatives from all parts of the state will be at Johnstown for the session. J. H. Mohler, of Harrisburg, is the President of the association, while D. P. Ripley, of Altoona, is the Secretary. A banquet will be held for the visitors during their stay in Johnstown. This will probably be served at Moose Temple.
