GRANGE OPPOSES

Plan Methods of Proposed Change in State's Constitution

HARRISBURG, Pa., June 28.—The Grange, the largest rural organization in this state, has today announced its opposition to the proposed constitutional convention. The Grange, which has a membership of 100,000, has a long record of opposing any change in the constitution of the state which would result in a new constitution. It is believed that the Grange will be successful in its opposition to the proposed convention.

One of the outstanding features of the work of the last session of the legislature was the passage of the new constitution. The Grange, however, has always been opposed to any change in the constitution of the state. It is believed that the Grange will be successful in its opposition to the proposed convention.
