A PATTON GOLD BRICK INCIDENT

Editor of the Courier: Noting your article in last week's paper, entitled "Gold Brick Cure," we were reminded of a little incident during the week which we believe is entitled to the above heading, although it is of a somewhat different nature than the cure mentioned in the Courier article. Feeling a little frisky the other evening, two certain young men, while walking down street, happened to stumble over a plain, ordinary Patton Clay Manufacturing Co. building brick. Immediately an idea happened to enter into the mind of one of the young men and they took the brick to one of the drug stores, had it nicely wrapped and tied with a fancy colored cord, and taking it down street descended upon the steps of one of the local stores, and then crossed the street and strolled developments. The package proved to be the center of attraction, as quite a number of pedestrians eyed it up curiously. Finally down the street came two young men, who, stopping, looked longingly at the package from a distance, but their nerve failed them, so they went back and brought reinforcements with them. This time the third young man, who was apparently more game than the first two, after doing it up for the fraction of a minute decided to get it while the getting was good. Have you ever seen a kitten playing with a mouse? Well that is what we were reminded of, but this fellow after making a couple of reaches for the package and drawing back each time, finally landed it with the third reach and without looking to either side to see whether or not he was being pursued by the owner or the chief-of-police, disappeared like a flash around the corner, holding tightly to the package. "Boss speed king," one of the boys remarked as he caught a glimpse of his boss. We certainly would have been pleased to see the expression on his face when he opened the package in the dark alley and found he had only a gold brick.

With apologies to the Patton Clay Manufacturing Co.

Courier Adds New Features

Readers Will Notice a Few Changes and Additional Pages.

Beginning this week The Courier, as readers will notice, has added a number of new features, and additional pages. This new policy will be continued from week to week. Departments not heretofore contained in The Courier and found elsewhere are as follows:

Two columns containing news caught throughout Pennsylvania.

Three columns containing the news review of current events.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale in one column.

Several columns of illustrations.

Several columns containing the most important news of the nation.

The Kitchen Cabinet, Short Story, etc.

Beginning in the issue of today, we will start a great serial story entitled "Mary Marie" by Eleanor Porter, the author of "Pollyanna," and you can rest assured that it is a clean, wholesome story, full of interest that every member of the family will enjoy.

Twenty hospitals in three years is the record of one disabled fighter discovered by the American Legion. Physicians at Fort Lyon, Colorado, where this patient is now being treated, say that he at least will never suffer from getting in a rut.

FOR SALE—Lightning Calculator. Adds, subtracts, multiplies. New and never used. Will be sold at a bargain. See it at Courier office.

FOR SALE—Eight Horses, both heavy and medium weights, also, new and second handed automobiles, trunks and tractors. See A. W. Bash, Patton, R. D., Pa. Smoyd.
