The Eternal Feminine. Reslyn is only 5, but she has proved more than once that she is a true daughter of Eve. Sunday morning she and daddy were taking their usual stroll along Drexel boulevard when daddy suddenly became aware of a peculiar noise that accompanied his daughter's steps.

"Roslyn," he inquired, "what is that funny 'clicking' noise?" He looked at her feet and saw they were encased in high arties, of which the two topmost buckles were undone. "Why do they up for you," he said. "Why, daddy," she exclaimed, astounded at his ignorance. "It's my goulashes; they're 'collegie.'"—Chicago Journal.

The Ordeal. "Why do you insist on singing to the men who call?" "As a test of devotion," replied Miss Cayenne. "As soon as I meet one who would rather hear me sing than listen to the phonograph, I'll feel fairly confident that he feels that blind, un-reasoning love on which enduring sentiment must depend."

All coal mining in Pennsylvania is affected by the decision of the supreme court in the case of the Home Brewing company, of Shenandoah, vs. the Thomas Colliery company, a mine cave-in case. The decision, rendered by Judge Henry, of Lebanon, is virtually that courts will not issue injunctions to prevent coal mining that might result in cave-ins. Any other decision, it is said by operators here, would have prevented the mining of 200,000,000 tons of coal in different parts of this region, by speculative fears of damages to real estate on the surface. Three judges, Marr, Shay and Ingram, associated with this case sixteen years before it was finally decided by Judge Henry, over 60,000 words of testimony was transcribed in paper books of 2500 pages, the largest ever sent to the higher court from Potsville. It was alleged damages were already being sustained by the Home Brewery. The decision leaves the brewery owners free to bring damage suits for those cave-ins.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

PERCY PORCUPINE

"I have a stronger fall than Willie Woodstock," said Percy Porcupine, "and altogether I am a stronger animal. I have a nice blunt nose and I'm a good climber, too."

"What has a blunt nose to do with being a good climber?" asked Peter Porcupine.

"Nothing much," said Percy. "I only mention both those facts in case any one is interested; I am certainly a sensible animal."

"I would be very foolish, indeed, if I didn't wear my suit of quills. I wouldn't be able to protect myself at all. When creatures see my quills they are frightened and that is a good thing. It most frighten creatures or they might hurt me. When they see my quills sticking out they think I am a fearful looking animal."

"Ah, it is well to be protected. I am so glad that in the Porcupine world it is the fashion to wear quills. I don't know what I'd do if another fashion should come in."

"Just suppose a fashion came in of wearing silk or muslin or something equally foolish! That would be dreadful!"

"Of course it would be," said Peter Porcupine, "but you needn't worry about that for no such fashion will come in."

"No porcupine would be foolish enough to take up such a fashion if it did start, and what is more, no porcupine would be so foolish as to start such a fashion."

"If the fashion came in with other animals it wouldn't make any difference to us. And we wouldn't have to pay any attention to it. If a porcupine should start such a fashion it might be different."

"That, as I said before, no porcupine will do such a thing. We don't change our styles all the time. In fact we don't change at all."

"That is where the Porcupine family is so sensible. When we're suited, we're suited. We don't get our suits from the shops and then say after we have them home:

"Oh dear, now I wish I'd ordered that blue and green suit which was hanging next to this one."

"We never say anything like that! In the first place there are no porcupine shops and in the second place we'd never go to them if there were."

"We have too much sense for that, and we're pleased with the suits we have on at present. Why change when one is satisfied?"

"There is no sense in doing such a thing and so we don't."

"Very sensible, indeed," said Percy Porcupine. "Oh, I love these woods up here where people so seldom would hurt them, but I like to be away where it is quiet."

"I would never do for a city life. Dear me, no. Even a small town wouldn't suit me. Do you suppose I'd care to walk about the streets and wave my tail as a dog would do when he met his friends? Not much. I wouldn't do that. I would be very unpopular in a town or a city and I wouldn't be happy there at all."

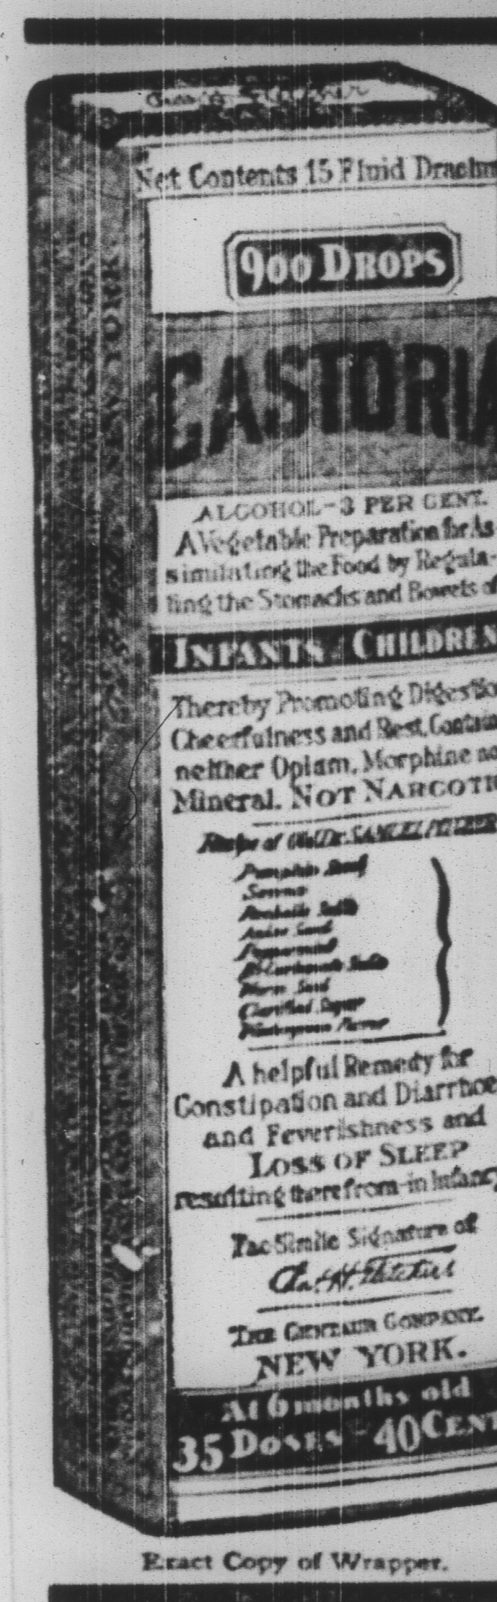

"Now, a dog is quite different. They are sociable. But when they try to make friends with us we don't make friends with them."

"Perhaps I shouldn't say they try to make friends with us, for they don't. They want to chase us and we make them nervous and upset and they can't keep away from us. And then we stick our quills into them when they come near us."

"Yes, dogs had better keep away from us if they don't want to be hurt. We're all right by ourselves in the quiet woods where few people ever come. We don't like the woods near places where people are."

"We're quite satisfied with our own ways. That's because we're porcupines!"
