Under the cohesiveness of the trees of the Allentown Fair Grounds the directors hold what may be their last meeting there. The big question discussed was moving the fair as quickly as possible to a new location of 212 acres in Salisbury, where it will be transformed into a landscape architect and exposition that will compete with the monster state fairs of the middle west.

Dr. A. H. Balliet, president of the fair, advocated moving as quickly as possible to the new site, which cost $100,000. General Harry C. Trexler backed the suggestion with a request for information as to ways and means. Dr. Balliet stated he had an offer for the old fair grounds of $900,000 and it was decided to expend $1,000,000 for the equipment of the new grounds. R. J. Pearce, of Des Moines, received the commission to lay out the new grounds as landscape architect and exposition building. It is planned to have the fair on the new grounds by 1924.

In order to break up the dangerous practice of boozing in the ranks of the deputy sheriffs and guards employed at the different coal and coke works in a recent issue of the Allentown Record, Judge E. H. Heppert made an example of Harry Sack, a Burns Detective arrested on June 29, at Republic with a bottle of whisky in his possession. It is claimed that while intoxicated he left the property of the Orient works and went to Republic, where he started a riot. Heppert sentenced Sack to the District Attorney William A. Miller made a plea for Sack, the latter was fined $100 and costs and sentenced to the Allegheny county workhouse for three months.

The state of Pennsylvania does not pay for the death of bears. It pays for sheep killed by bears, but not for bears. Farmers in Tioga, Lycoming and other up-state counties wrote to the department of agriculture, which administers the dog license fund, asking about getting paid for sheep that had been killed by bears, which are so numerous as to be a nuisance in some northern counties. They were informed there is no state fund for the purpose.

Accused of peddling whisky on the streets of Harrisburg, near York, three men were arrested by police officers and taken to the city jail. The men are Leo Pluck, St. Clair; Silas Denny, Lancaster; Louis Rosenwald, Pottsville; and Mrs. F. Doherty, Lancaster. The woman was released on her own recognizance and the men were committed to jail.

David Willetta, Harry Cummings, Ralph Andrews and Joseph Blackburn, of Johnstown, who were convicted in the Blair county court of robbing the First National Bank of Claysburg, were refused a new trial. Stolen articles of the bank, aggregating $21,000, were traced to Claysburg, New York and Boston and recovered.

The Nisky Hill Cemetery authorities are determined to break up spooning. The police captured three couples, who were held before Alderman Baum, in Bethlehem. One of the women was from Frenchtown and the other two were from North Side. The women were accompanied by South Side friends while their husbands were at work.

It is not often that a leopard turtle gets recognition in a state report, but the forestry department has just received a communication from a ranger of its men engaged in building roads in Milford county telling of the finding of a hard-shelled reptile bearing marks indicative of old age. The date "1942" was carved on the turtle's back.

The state compensation board in a decision handed down by Judge Commissioner Benjamin Jarrett, Jr., has ruled in favor of Gleason and refused compensation to E. M. Schreckengast, Kittanning, in a claim against George Markelov, of the same place, in which the effect of relationship in a contract is ruled upon. Schreckengast had a contract to mine coal at five cents a bushel, like his own men, furnish power and tools and lay track. He was injured while conducting the operation and lost an eye. The commissioner held the defendant had no control over the manner of doing the work, and that the relationship was that of employer and employee, but of contractor and contractor.

A suit to recover for $5000 damages was filed by Clarence W. Huntington, policeman at Berwick, against Constable Bodine, a Berwick constable, following charges made against him that a public airing of five cents a bushel, like his own men, furnish power and tools and lay track. He was injured while conducting the operation and lost an eye. The commissioner held the defendant had no control over the manner of doing the work, and that the relationship was that of employer and employee, but of contractor and contractor.

When Officer Schulz, of the Uniontown police department, tagged an automobile which had violated the city parking ordinance little did he think he had located the circle of British officials. This fact was not brought out until a letter from the British embassy was received. In the letter was enclosed the tag. The letter said that the British ambassador's car was registered with the state department and was immune from any official action by municipal or state authorities. It expressed regret that a city ordinance had been violated. When the car was tagged the British ambassador was on route to Deer Park, Md.

Charging that the fall on the icy sidewalk at Post street and Broadway, Uniontown, last January, 14 and fractured his leg between the hip and the knee, Mrs. Mary Ellen Costello, wife of George Costello, of North Union town, has just brought suit for $15,000 damages against the City of Uniontown. Negligence on the part of the city in not removing the ice, according to city ordinance, is alleged. In a recent issue of the Allentown Record heavy damages were awarded.

An expedition was moving through reputedly unexplored African bush. They emerged one day from the dense tropical undergrowth into a small clearing, where they were astonished to see a pile of empty whisky bottles. "There's been a Scotman here," remarked one of the party, himself a Scot, and proud to think that one of his nation had been first in this lonely spot. His pride was soon turned to anger, for another voice broke in: "Nonsense! If that had been a Scotsman he'd have taken the bottle back!"

Chicago to London.

A special train will carry freight from Chicago to New York in 48 hours, observes Capper's Weekly. This freight will be rushed aboard the great ship Majestic, the world's largest boat, built by the Germans and now operated by an English company, and if all goes well seven days after the freight is loaded in Chicago it will be unloaded in England. What would Columbus think if he could see this modern ship, says W. D. Boyce, according to Capper's Weekly. The Majestic crosses the Atlantic in about one-seventh of the time. It could carry the three ships Columbus used, his entire crew and 2,000 other passengers, to say nothing of the tons and tons of freight. Four hundred years hence they may read about our trying to send freight from Chicago to England in seven days, and wonder why we were so slow. Probably airplanes as big as the Majestic will be making the Chicago-London trip in one-seventh of today's time.

President Harding Still Tries to Bring the Railway Strike to an End.

CONFERS WITH THE LEADERS

Government's Plan for Fair Distribution of Fuel and Food and to Curb Profiteering Put into Operation—Bavaria in Revolt Against Control by Berlin.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

President Harding and his administration forces devoted themselves last week almost exclusively to the problems arising from the railway and coal strikes. Their efforts might result in the ending of the former was the renewed hope at the close of the week, for Mr. Harding held a most important conference in Washington with Chairman T. De Witt Jewell of the American Association of Railway Executives, and President Jewell of the railway shippers. His aim presumably was to induce the rail executives to modify their firm attitude concerning the industry rule and to persuade the shippers to recognize the decision of the railway labor board and return to work pending a rehearing of their grievances.

After leaving the White House Mr. Cuyler announced that the executives of 143 of the largest railroads in the country would meet in New York on August 1 to talk over a tentative plan for settling the shippers' strike. He would not tell what Mr. Harding had suggested, but denied that he had asked the executives to recede from their position on the industry rule. The presidents of western roads insisted the strikers would not be taken back with full seniority rights restored.

Having abandoned for the time being any hope of ending the coal miners' strike, the President and his aids turned their attention to the question of averting the threatened fuel famine and followed up the call on the various state executives to facilitate and protect the resumption of mining with measures designed to insure a fair distribution of such coal as may be produced and to curb profiteering. Secretary of Commerce Hoover devised a plan which was promptly adopted and put into effect with the legal approval of Attorney General Daugherty. It rests upon the powers of the interstate commerce commission, which body, declaring the existence of a national emergency, took charge of the routing of cars and the distribution of fuel and food. The plan provided for a committee of general supervision in Washington, to be named by the President and which will establish in every coal producing district a representative and a committee of operators. Also, there is an administrative committee comprising representatives of the presidential committee together with representatives of operators, representatives of the railways, and where necessary, representatives of the larger consuming groups.

The basis of prices agreed upon between the operators and the secretary of commerce on June 1 is to be maintained, except where varied by the presidential committee, and this same basis of price determination shall be applied to all districts which are so far not co-operating.

President Harding announced the appointment of Attorney General Daugherty, Secretary of the Interior Fall, Secretary of Commerce Hoover, and Commissioner of Education of the interstate commerce commission as members of the general committee. Mr. Hoover is chairman. A fifth member was to be added to undertake the administrative direction.

Mr. Hoover called on the governors of the states to set up state organizations to co-operate in the distribution of the available coal supplies to the points of greatest need. Distribution of railway coal will be directed from Washington. It was stated there that states which have large bituminous deposits will be expected to mine their own coal instead of obtaining it from other fields under the emergency order.

ILLINOIS the prospects for ending the mine strike were slightly brighter. President Farrington of the Illinois miners, always an advocate of separate state agreements, came to the conclusion that the time for putting that policy into action had come and called a convention of delegates of every local union in the state to meet in Peoria August 3 to consider peace proposals of the operators. Next day he rescinded the call because of "premature" publicity. Acting Governor Sterling asked Farrington to consider the proposal that the miners of Illinois return to work at once at the wage scale and under the working conditions existing when operations ceased April 1 last, pending a readjustment of the same by an agreed tribunal, and that representatives of the miners and operators of Illinois should meet and endeavor to arrive at a settlement. Farrington replied that this plan was impracticable.

Orders for immense quantities of coal have been placed in England by Americans but not all of them are being accepted because of market conditions there. Prices of coal and shipping and freight rates have advanced sharply in Great Britain. The British government is unwilling to allow coal to America, and American stock workers may refuse to handle it if it comes.

ONE J. Cleve Dean, chairman of the railway employees' publicity association, sent to President Harding a telegram bitterly attacking the supposed attitude of the administration toward the great strike. He said: "For you or any governor to attempt to operate the mines or railroads by military forces or to attempt to draft men into mining or railroad service would be an attempt to establish involuntary servitude" and he predicted such an attempt would bring on the "long protracted war between capital and labor." He asserted, also, that the Republican party was hostile to the American farmer and labor and that "the hard times that now exist is a premeditated plan to bring the farmer and labor down to their knees."

Mr. Harding's reply to this outburst, while dignified, was a scathing rebuke of Dean's "political partisan references" and of his false assumptions. The President explained at length the attitude of the government and asserted its intention to speak and act, not for any one class alone, but for "the American people as a whole and the common good of all its citizenship." He made it clear that while the right to strike was recognized, the government would fully protect those who desired to work. The latter, he said, in responding to the call of the country, are exercising their rights "at the same time making their contribution to our common American welfare."

CHICAGO'S street car strike was still in the making last week. Hope and despair alternated, the former fostered by the optimism of International President Mahon who told the men they must take a referendum vote on a new proposal made by the companies, and the latter due to the position of local President Quinn, who said the employees would agree to offer the employers were likely to make. The workers were called to hold a mass meeting Monday evening of this week, and Quinn told the Chicago public to prepare to find a strike in effect the following morning.

DEBATE on the tariff in the senate was renewed last week by Senator McCumber's assertion that in 1912 Republicans for the newspaper publishers told the senate finance committee that if newspaper paper were not placed on the free list they would defeat the Republican party at the polls, and that the committee refusing to yield, the publishers therefore did not feel that the election. Other newspaper editors for the newspaper publishers told the senate finance committee that if a duty were imposed on newspaper from the Republican party would be driven from

"power." This, Mr. Smoot supposed, was the basis of McCumber's statement, but he, Smoot, did not think Norris had been authorized by the publishers to make such a threat. McCumber reiterated his statements with added details and was supported by Watson of Indiana who related how Norris and other publishers in 1908 offered to make Joe Cannon president if he would put through a bill placing newspaper and wood pulp on the free list. Cannon, he said, ordered Norris from his office. All of this, whether true or not, was highly entertaining to the Democratic senators.

COMMISSIONER BLAIR of the internal revenue bureau dealt the liquor industry a hard blow by forbidding further imports of wines and liquors until the supplies already in the country for nonbeverage uses are insufficient for national requirements. Secretary Hughes asked, and pronounced, was promised the aid of the British government in the suppression of liquor smuggling from Bermuda and the Bahamas. The British government, however, has refused the unofficial request of the United States for the right to search outside the three mile limit British vessels suspected of being engaged in smuggling liquor into the United States.

THE Bavarian government in its open revolt against the central German government at Berlin and has issued a decree that rejects and supplants the recent legislation by the Reichstag for the defense of the republic. The Bavarian minister at Berlin was instructed to inform Chancellor Wirth that any provision of force official attempting to operate in Bavaria would be promptly arrested. Wirth has called a conference of all the German states to consider the problem, and if Bavaria does not suppress its new law President Ebert may summon the state-parliament, or tribunal of the states, to deal with the case. Chancellor Loebenstein of Bavaria says he is opposed to any separatist movement but that his state will not submit to any abridgment of its rights. The old enmity between Bavaria and Prussia and the strong monarchist sentiment among the Bavarians make the situation difficult for Berlin.

FROM several widely separated sources comes the information that soviet Russia is planning military operations on her western front in the autumn. Frank Vanderlip, the American financier who has been in touch with the Russians in Berlin, says in Paris that the probability is increasing that the bolsheviks will force, such a war on Europe in the harvest season, attacking Rumania and Poland in an attempt to rally Russian units and also to get food from the eastern harvests. Russian edictors in Bulgaria assert the soviet government is preparing for a drive through the Balkans and that westward through Austria.
