FIGURES THAT TALK! There are over 13,000,000 telephones in the United States. It is hard to believe that here in our own country we have 64 per cent of the world's telephones, but it is nevertheless a true, for the total number in the entire world is about 20,000,000. Europe, with 5,280,000 telephones, has one telephone per 100 population; in fact, there are but 1.2 telephones per 100 population throughout the entire world. It can easily be seen to what great extent telephone service has been developed in the United States when it is considered that we have over 12 telephones to every 100 people.

TELEPHONE CORD PLAYS VITAL PART. If Damaged Will Interfere With the Giving of Good Telephone Service. Good telephone service depends to a great extent upon what appears to be an unimportant part of the equipment—the telephone cord. If not in good condition, this little cord, usually between five and six feet in length, can cause serious trouble with the service. For instance, a simple knot or twist may cause a break in the service by weakening the delicate wires inside and if these wires are completely severed the service will be entirely cut off. Sometimes a subscriber absent-mindedly jerks the telephone to straighten a twisted cord. While that jerk may not cause any serious trouble at the time, yet it may be the means of tearing loose its connection inside the telephone which will eventually cut off the service. It is a well-known fact that moisture causes corrosion or rust when it comes in contact with metal and in the telephone business thousands of trouble complaints arise from wet telephone cords. If the cord runs against a wet umbrella or a sponge on the desk or if rain blowing in from an open window falls on the cord, the result will probably be trouble with the service. Baby, in a playful mood may tug on the telephone cord in his trysts and start chewing. Everyone knows that baby's salivary glands are exceedingly active and, of course, the danger of a saturated cord is the result. Nothing is an important process, but it is based on telephone cords. Moisture will gradually work its way into the cord and the result will be corrosion of the wires, which at the very least means a noisy line and sometimes the service is cut off entirely.

STOCK WIDELY DISTRIBUTED. The American Telephone and Telegraph Company which, together with its Associated Companies, comprises what is commonly known as the Bell System, had over 150,000 stockholders, including over 10,000 foreign stockholders at the end of the year 1921. More than half of the Company's stockholders are women.
