 "Nothing will ever prevent a man's wife from smelling his breath." "We have one thing in our favor." "What is that?" "Three drinks don't smell any different from one."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A fond aunt inquired of her nephew how he was getting along at school.
 "Have you been whipped yet?" she asked teasingly. "Not by the kids," was his prompt reply. —Judge

Blinks—"Why does Jones always take that parrot with him when he takes a motor trip?" Jinks—"Well, his wife won't stand for usual profanity, and somebody has to provide the strong language when a tire blows out or the engine stalls, and the parrot has a splendid vocabulary."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

London Policeman (to country youth)—"Now then, my lad, hadst you better get a move on?" Youth—"I'm waiting for a man wot offered to take me watch an' get it regulated to Lunnon time. Fought to be back by now, fer 'is nigh on two hours since 'e went."—Toronto Telegram.

 or four times tonight, but she's absolutely refuses to answer." She—"Oh, that's nothing to worry about.
 You see, she's a telephone operator."
 —Passing Show

"That married couple in the next flat are having a terrible argument."
 "I don't hear his voice at all." "No! it's the regular family argument." Boston Transcript.

Husband—"Frocks a bit thin for a night like this—what?" Wife—"How do I look in it?" Husband—"Oh, ripping!" Wife—"Then it's perfectly comfortable, thanks!"—Punch.

Link By Link

One of the strongest fraternal organizations in the world has as its symbol the linked chain which shows the strength to be found in unity.
 Buying where you live from those who are your neighbors will forge a linked chain of strength that will build up your home town and your home district.

Yet, there is another story about the linked chain. It is as strong only as its weakest link. When you send your dollars out of your district you weaken the chain and imperil the prosperity and advancement of all its inhabitants.

THE film version of Edith M. Hull's book. A tale of the Arabian Sahara. It concerns the infatuation of an Arabian Tribal Chieftain for a haughty English girl who is visiting Biskara, his abduction of the girl and the many dramatic episodes of a strange romance. There is a surprise finish in which The Shiek proves to be an English nobleman.
