Farm Calendar.

European Hen Flea—The European hen flea has been found in Pennsylvania. It often appears in the nests and causes much trouble for the hen to keep on the milk flow. That is used for mites will kill the flea.

Dry Pastures—As pastures begin to get short and dry, a little grain or silage if available, should be fed to keep up the milk flow. A good mixture can be made from the home grown grains and some protein concentrates. The following mixture is suggested: 200 pounds corn meal; 100 pounds ground oats; 150 pounds cottonseed meal or gluten; 100 pounds linseed or peanut meal.

Is the Silo Ready?—Experience has demonstrated that to be a good storage for feed, a silo must be airtight, weather-tight, reinforced to prevent spreading, and smooth on the inside. Round silos are preferable to others because the silage will pack more easily. While it seems quite a while before silo filling time, if a new one is to be built or an old one needs repairs, now is the time to attend to it. Have the silo ready when the corn is ready.

Shade Tree Insects—If you are experiencing damage to shade trees through leaf eating insects, spray the trees thoroughly with a mixture of two pounds of dry arsenate of lead to fifty gallons of water.

Eat Vegetables—Hot weather meals on the farm, as well as elsewhere should include as many vegetables as possible. Fresh green vegetables, fruits and dairy products are nature's best vitamin sources.

Hay Cutting—Timothy and clover lose much of their value when allowed to stand too long before cutting. Do not permit the timothy to get tough or the clover to stand long after the full blossom stage.

Have Enjoyable Outing.

The first annual picnic of the office force of the Cresson Division of the Pennsylvania Railroad was held Saturday at Mountain Lake Park, situated along the William Penn Highway, near Cresson. Employees from the office at Cresson, Hillwood and Altoona attended the outing. Dancing, athletic events and various amusements were a feature of the picnic. Due to the coolness of the water the swimming contests were called off.

Miss Mary Drass, of the storekeeper's office, Cresson, had her foot caught on an exposed root and was thrown heavily to the ground while participating in the 50-yard dash for women. She suffered numerous cuts and bruises to her right arm and hand.

Reuben H. Colaboure, of the storekeeper's office, also had a bad fall on the race course during the 50-yard dash for men, receiving severe cuts and bruises to his right arm and hand.

Sub-division Bosses of Pennsylvania Railroad Meet at Odd Fellows Hall

A meeting of all the sub-division foremen of the Cresson Division of the Pennsylvania Railroad, employed under Supervisor H. L. Pierce, was held in Odd Fellows' Hall, Cresson on Saturday evening. Leo J. Kennedy, of Wilmington, Del., Chairman of the Foreman's Federation, was present and explained to the men the results accomplished so far. He urged the men to greater activity in the federation and the selection of good men to represent them before the management of the company.

Special stress was laid on the important part these men have in the adequate transportation program which the railroads of the country have marked out in order to avoid a car congestion in the approaching fall.

Among the men present in addition to Messrs. Pierce and Kennedy were the following: F. V. Elig, C. C. sub-division 1, Cresson; M. J. Farbaugh, S. D. 2, of Ebensburg Junction; T. J. Elig, S. D. 3, of Bradley Junction; V. S. Babson, S. D. 3-1-2, Bradley Junction; P. J. Willis, E. & B. L. sub-division 1, Ebensburg; F. A. Airhart, S. D. 2, Ebensburg; J. A. Fernwall, S. D. 3, Nanticoke; A. F. Baker, D. 4, Tarr Rocks; W. J. Lyberger, S. D. 5, Vintonville; T. H. Gibbons, S. D. 6, Wehrum; P. N. Hulihan, S. D. 8, Dilltown; J. W. McNitt, S. D. 8, Hesseber; Gerald McDonald, S. D. 9, Josephine; Charles Keith, C. & L. Sub. Div. 1, Cresson; J. L. Conrad, S. D. 2, Ashville; J. J. Gallagher, S. D. 3, Dyars; E. J. Coy, S. D. 4, Van Ormer; William Wilks, S. D. 5, Coniport; and Wreck Foreman J. A. Long, of Cresson.

P. R. R. Build New Terminal.

In the history of industrial emergency reconstruction few examples can compare with the recent accomplishment of the Pennsylvania Railroad. The herculean task of maintaining the traffic facilities while the members of the unit were still aglow, graphically reveals one phase of public utility work. Whatever happens the public utility must carry on. Here also is furnished a striking argument to support private ownership and operation of this essential service.

A few minutes before midnight, June 10, fire was discovered in the platform abutting the Broad Street Terminal. With exceeding rapidity the flames spread and enveloped the entire train shed which spanned the 16-track elevated station structure. Men and express rooms and power plant below the tracks became a furnace. The fire engaged practically all of Philadelphia's fire fighting forces and raged until sunrise next day.

The week-day total of 827 through and local trains were operated with only slight interruption of schedule on the day of the fire from West Philadelphia, North Philadelphia and the Chestnut and 31st Street Stations.

With the exception of a few in the local community service, no trains were cancelled. Only those familiar with the terminal complexities of railroading can comprehend the magnitude of this traffic diversion, accomplished, as it was, with no appreciable interference to through traffic. It meant a saving of thousands of dollars to Philadelphia business and that of Eastern Pennsylvania generally.

While the buckled steel framework of the train shed was yet hot on the day of the fire, suburban electric train service was resumed on a normal basis from a temporary platform just outside the wrecked train shed. This was being constructed while the flames were fighting back at the firemen below. On Tuesday morning, June 12, a few hours after the embers began to cool, a temporary run-way had been constructed through the wreckage giving access to the station and that was followed by resumption of the Philadelphia-New York 6:
