No Wonder Portland Cement Stucco Endures

No wonder it is unaffected by weather conditions—that rain only makes it harder. For Portland Cement Stucco in all essentials is concrete. And you know how well concrete serves in foundations, in homes, in hospitals, in mighty dams, in roads and skyscrapers.

Be sure, therefore, that you always specify stucco by the full name, Portland Cement Stucco, and get the enduring strength which that tenacious binder, Portland Cement, assures.

Architects will tell you that Portland Cement Stucco assures a home of distinction and beauty. No other exterior treatment offers such a variety of color and texture. It harmonizes perfectly with any landscape setting.

And the ideal backing for Portland Cement Stucco is Concrete Masonry—Concrete Block or Tile.

Watch for advertisements telling about the many other uses of Portland Cement. And remember that the Portland Cement Association has a free personal service to offer you. Whether you use concrete or have it used for you, this service will give you more for your money.

AUTOISTS GROWING TO BE VERY CARELESS

125 Motorists Living Today Will Be Dead and Buried By the First of Next November.

"A great many people are alive and well today that will be neither in October, because of the apparently increasing carelessness of users of the roads," said Secretary Paul D. Wright of the state highway department at Harrisburg the other day.

"The spring weather of April increased the number of cars on the highways—and the number of automobile accidents. There were sixty-six smash ups in March on the roads of Pennsylvania and 96 in April. Five persons were killed in March and six in April. Again, as in every month since we began to keep records of accidents on state highways, the greatest number of accidents occurred on absolutely straight road sections.

"So, if fatal accidents occur in their usual ratio, 125 persons today will be dead and buried Nov. 1; and nearly 1,200 other persons will have suffered injury more or less serious. It seems to me it is time to conserve our human resources, and this can be done if drivers are as cautious at all times as, after the accident, they wish they had been—if they are still living."

The greater number of accidents in April happened in the Allegheny district, there being 15. The district in and around Harrisburg was a close second with fourteen.

Four occupants of motor cars and two pedestrians were killed in April. 70 occupants of motor cars and four pedestrians were injured.

In the 96 accidents 124 automobiles were involved, 94 of them being open models.

Six accidents occurred at railroad crossings, 6 at road crossings, 13 at highway bridges, two at undergrade crossings, three at culverts on the highways, 51 on straight road sections, 21 on light curves, 15 on sharp curves, 15 on light grades, and four on heavy grades. Of the pedestrians injured, six were walking on the same side and in the same direction as the moving cars. The highway department often has suggested that pedestrians particularly at night, walk toward traffic, so they can see approaching danger. Sixty-nine accidents occurred on dry roads and 27 on wet roads.

GAME PROTECTOR WANTS TO FIND BOARDING SITES

The State Game Commission is Preparing a Bulletin for the Benefit of the Hunters.

Farmers who are willing to furnish board for hunters and fishermen in Cambria County, are being solicited to send their names and addresses to Game Protector Elmer B. Thompson 396 Coleman avenue, Johnstown, who in turn will furnish them to the state game commission. The commission intends to issue a bulletin to sportsmen containing these names and addresses, so that the hunter or fisherman may arrange trips accordingly.

For many years there has been a more or less antagonistic spirit displayed by farmers toward hunters. It is the aim of the present commission to bring about a better understanding. The true sportsman, it is asserted, does not wish to trespass upon a farmer's land or trespass upon his good nature. But with the great acreage of Pennsylvania stocked during recent years solely through the efforts of the sportsmen, whose license fees made the work possible, it is felt that the rural residents should have a kinder attitude toward the gunner who courteously approaches land and, in most instances, asks permission to hunt before crossing a fence.

Through the listing of the names of farmers who can accommodate hunters at a fair price, the game commission will be taking a long step toward establishing a better feeling between the two interests. Once the farmer gets acquainted with the true sportsman, it is held, he will be glad to entertain him at convenient seasons, for no jollier fellow is extant, than the man with a gun and dog. And he will have a wealth of information to impart to the farmer, at the same time that he is receiving a similar wealth from the farmer. In acquaintance with the commission believes, lies the secret of friendship.

Cambria county affords some good hunting. Farmers hereabout are as a rule, more friendly than the average ruralite. And Game Protector Thompson hopes to be able to convince the few who have posted their lands that it will be to their advantage to accord the privilege of hunting to the genuine, careful, licensed hunter, who would not injure another's property, or do the least bit of damage intentionally and who is willing to pay liberally for board and lodging.

Mr. Thompson has sent out a number of letters, with self addressed and stamped return envelope for reply, in which the proposition is set forth in a clear manner. The game protector is particularly anxious that every farmer

Interesting Little Stories of the Days When the West Was a Land of Danger and Action

Across the white plain the heat waves shimmered and danced. Mirages of cool lakes appeared, mocking their thirst, and vanished. In the background stood a range of black walled mountains through which the emigrants could see no opening. And this was Christmas day, 1849.

Early in the spring they had left the middle west, 100 wagons strong, for the gold fields of California. Then the fatal decision of a part of the train to try a shortcut across the mountains had brought them into this valley whose floor was more than 200 feet below the level of the sea. In it they wandered for weeks of torment.

Again the party split. One group, 36 persons in all, some bachelors of Illinois, who called themselves "The Jayhawkers," pressed on toward the mountains. Some of them died of starvation, some of thirst, and others went mad and wandered away into the desert. In all, thirteen perished before they fought through to safety.

The other party, men with families, found a tiny spring and camped there to rest. Their food supplies ran low. Their oxen began to die and their wagons to fall apart in the blistering sun, so Assiah Bennett, their leader, sent two young fellows, Will Manley and John Rodgers, north to find a way out of the trap. As they departed Mrs. Bennett gave Manley a double handful of rice, and to the hungry pinched faces of the children.

The emigrants now sat down to a wait the return of the two scouts. A week passed, two, three—and still they did not return. At the end of the fourth week all except Assiah Bennett's wife abandoned hope. "They will come back," she declared steadfastly. But they did not and the emigrants resolved upon one final desperate attempt. They began stripping the canvas covers from the prairie schooners and making pack saddles to cinch upon their emaciated oxen.

And then Manley and Rodgers returned! They spoke but briefly of the days of horror, spent in struggling from one water hole to the next across the 250 miles of desert, of the dead of the Jayhawker party that they had found along the trail. But they had brought food and, most vital of all, they had found a way out.

They guided the party on the long climb to the summit of the Panamint ridge. As the emigrants reached the crest and looked back into the inferno from which they had escaped, Assiah Bennett's wife raised her arms in a gesture of farewell. "Good-by to Death Valley," she cried. Thus did Death Valley get its name.
