Responsibilities and Duties

What are the responsibilities and duties of a public utility company? Recently, by radio, we asked the question. Many answers came from thinking men and women. Here are a few:

- The light and power company must provide best possible service every minute, every hour, every day.
It must keep up to the times, with modern plants and equipment.
It must safeguard the public and its own employees in the use of its service.
It must sell service at a fair rate and likewise earn a fair return to reimburse those whose money is invested in the business.
It must anticipate the future needs of communities served, and so far as possible, be ready with service when needed.
Its employees must be high-grade, efficient, careful and courteous.
Every detail of its business must be in accordance with highest principles of honor.
Subscribing to these sentiments of our patrons, we pledge our compliance with them, in letter and spirit.
